Stupidity, Two Kinds
4 Great Talkers, One Silent
Why Prince Paul?
Songs of Angels

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1920.)

Betting eight to one on Harding. It might as well be a million to one. Here and there bets have been made at fifty to one. The absence of a Democratic party this year helps to explain the weird odds. Some men presumably will vote for Cox, but they do not say so, because their friends would laugh. That is new in a national election.

A stupidly offensive cartoon was made by an ill-advised understrapper in the employ of the Republican committee and sent to various newspapers. Telegrams were immediately sent three weeks ago by the committee condemning the cartoon and forbidding its publication. One newspaper, of small circulation, foolishly published it.

THAT particular publication will not affect any vote. Only an idiot would allow a matter with which Senator Harding had no connection, direct or indirect, to influence him.

But many Democratic newspapers have widely published this cartoon, thinking to help Mr. Cox, and their action, offensive to religious sentiment, ought to cost the Democrats many votes.

It all matters little, for, as every sane man knows, at this moment Senator Harding is elected and Mr. Cox is beaten. Only the size of the majority remains uncertain.

The world's greatest orators, perhaps, were Demosthenes, Isocrates, Mirabeau and Burke. A well-written article, describing all four of them, would interest nine hundred out of a thousand men less than the news story about Silent Pat Hanley, who spent ten years in prison without even saying a word. He writes that he once talked too much, which got him into trouble, and has never spoken since. Doctors believe that he could not talk now if he tried.

The world likes queer things. Ancient rulers bought hideous dwarfs and creatures malformed by surgical operations. We haven't changed entirely.

The New York Evening Post is owned by Mr. Lamont, of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. Innocently striving to "act like an editor," Mr. Lamont writes to Mr. Gay, who runs his paper for him, saying: "I intend to vote for Cox and Roosevelt. My chief reason is that Cox is for the League of Nations and Harding is against it."

Mr. Lamont is kind to Senator Harding in this last minute announcement.

War has given many millions of profit to Morgan & Company—they handled five thousand millions for England alone, and did not lose on the handling.

More war would give more profit to Morgan & Company. Mr. Lamont, of J. P. Morgan & Company, says: "Cox is for the League of Nations and I am for it. Senator Harding is against the League of Nations and I am against him." He might have added, "And so it is with every member of the firm."

There you have some more votes for Senator Harding, although he does not need them.

The frogs asked Jupiter for a king. He sent them a log on which they perched, but were not satisfied. He sent them a savage bird that devoured them. You read that without surprise.

Savage African tribes want a king to lead them, to think for them and kill them if he thinks best. That does not surprise you. But it is surprising that the people of Greece, with thousands of years of highest intelligence behind them, should allow Prince Paul, a boy of nineteen, to be put up as "King of Greece." A nation of keen intelligence you would think might rule itself.

Suppose Paul of Greece and Alfonso of Spain should meet incognito in a cabaret in Paris and should quarrel about some young lady with twinkling toes, then go home and nurse a war. The League of Nations nonsense would give to this country the proud privilege of helping to pay the bills and supply men for the fighting.

This country might well say to Europe, "When you have sufficient democracy, common sense and self-respect to get along without kings, come over and talk to us about a league."

Mr. Cox says he wants a League of Nations "so that the angels again can sing 'peace on earth, good will to men,' as they did twenty centuries ago. If Mr. Cox will look over the famous battles of the world he will see that quite a few of them happened within the past twenty centuries. It is one thing for the angels to sing about peace, another to make them stop fighting. A League of Nations encouraging war in Europe by making the United States responsible for the bills, besides supplying men, would make the angels feel more discouraged than ever about peace on earth.

Sworn testimony shows that workmen in one small, single union were blackmailed to the tune of $16,000 a week by an individual who, in turn acting as their representative, blackmailed employers for higher pay, for which the employers robbed investors. Nice combination.

What vast sums labor unions, wisely led, could raise for their own protection, their own fights and for permanent prosperity.

RATHOM TOOL OF BRITISH

Much of His Spy Material Supplied by London, Says Sworn Confession

Providence was amazed today by the discovery that John R. Rathom of the Providence Journal, one of the leading "spy baiters" of the country during the war, was a self-confessed falsifier of facts and a tool of the British government.

By his own confession, made public by the Department of Justice in New York, Rathom deliberately misrepresented facts regarding methods employed in securing information of German plots.

He admitted that tales of alleged prodigies performed by his reporters during the early days of the war were in part colorful figments of his imagination.

TO CONCEAL "SOURCES."

He further confessed that his alleged exposures were mainly based on information furnished him by secret service workers for allied governments, and that he misrepresented to "deceive the enemy." He admitted much of the material exploited was supplied by British agents.

Rathom admitted that the impression which the public received, that his little band of "remarkable" reporters had accomplished more than the Department of Justice and secret service combined, was false.

He retracted his criticism of the Mourning Thousands View the Body Before Funeral Service in St. George's Cathedral

By International News Service.

London, Oct. 28. — Amidst heartrending scenes of emotion funeral services were conducted today at St. George's Roman Catholic Cathedral, Southwark, for the late Terence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork, who died in the seventy-fourth day of his hunger strike at Brixton jail.

A dramatic incident occurred in the cathedral just before Archbishop Mannix of Australia opened the services. Four men, who had made their way to the altar, threw off their long cloaks and stood before the catafalque attired in uniforms of the Sinn Fein army with swords in their belts.

Ten thousand persons attended the funeral, but there was no disorder. Among the mourners were the Lord Mayor of Dublin and the mayors of five of the London boroughs. Four hundred policemen were massed about the cathedral, but some of them were ordered back to the station houses. The crowd was so orderly that their services were not needed.

After the funeral rites hundreds of persons who had been unable to gain admission to the church formed in line and there was a continuous procession past the coffin until 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

The home office made no effort to Jail Miss Pankhurst for "Sedition"

By International News Service.

London, Oct. 28.—Sylvia Pankhurst, associate editor of the Workers Dreadnought, was today sentenced to six months imprisonment on the charge of circulating seditious literature in the navy.

Since Miss Pankhurst's arrest during a raid on the offices of the Workers' Dreadnought ten days ago, charges have been lodged at Bow street police station against an unnamed man who was accused of carrying communications between her and Nicolai Lenin.

The government alleged that the Workers' Dreadnought was supported by the British Communists or the British branch of the Third Internationale.

BRITISH AGENTS IN SHIP PLOT

Foreign Interests Seek to Hamper Development of U. S. Merchant Marine

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 28.—"The Shipping Board is in possession of very definite information that foreign agents are again at work in this country in an attempt to retard the progress of the American merchant marine," one high official of the Shipping Board stated today.

It is charged by officials of the board that reports to the effect that the House Committee on the marchant marine has completed a report showing huge graft and irregularities in the Shipping Board, are a part of the plan of foreign agents to discredit the Shipping Board and its work.

It was stated at the offices of the House Merchant Marine Committee that the report has not yet been drafted and that Chairman Walsh has refused to make any preliminary statement. It was stated that a report has been drawn by experts employed by the committee showing the result of their investigation, but that this report has not been submitted and will not be acted upon until late in November. Furthermore, it was stated that the report of the experts will be an attempt to aid the Shipping Board and will not be an expose of irregularities by individuals.

Officials of the Shipping Board admitted that they have conducted an investigation of reports derogatory to the Shipping Board which have been circulated from time to time and that it has been fairly well established that these reports have originated with men who have close foreign connections.

According to officials of the Shipping Board the "Ring" that is alleged to be working in opposition to the success of the Shipping Board is closely conected with certain British, German and Chinese interests.

ASSAILANT PURSUES GIRL, 13

Wakefield Police Hunt Man Who Held Up Child on Way From School

Wakefield was aroused again today by the third attack on a girl within three weeks. Police of the town are now hunting for the man who accosted thirteen-year-old Myrtle Lawson in the lonely Woodville district, swung brutally at her when she spurned his importunate offers of money and pursued her till she gained refuge at her home on Nahant street.

The child was returning from school when the stranger stepped out from the underbrush in a section similar to that where the Wanamaker girl was assaulted exactly three weeks ago. When she refused his offer of silver coins to accompany him, he turned back into the woods.

SEEKS HELP IN VAIN.

The stranger again accosted Myrtle a mile further along the road. He offered the child bills, and when she again spurned his advances he dropped his wheedling manner and swung his clenched fist wildly at her. Myrtle dodged, picked up the book which was knocked from her grasp, and ran.

With the man pursuing her, Myrtle reached the almshouse to find it closed. The man waited on the road while she knocked. Myrtle ran through the yard to a nearby residence, where again she knocked in vain, the man all the while hovering in the roadway.

CHASE EXHAUSTED GIRL.

The child, nearly exhausted, ran up Nahant street toward her home and the man disappeared. Police Chief Pollard and patrolmen searched in an auto for the stranger who was described as being about thirty years, short, slight build, pale complexion and wearing a brown suit, brown hat and shoes.

Myrtle lives with A. L. Oliver at No. 230 Nahant street and attends the Franklin Grammar School.

DIAMONDS STOLEN AT PITTSFIELD

Police Seek Vanished Woman Companion of Gem Salesman in $100,000 Robbery

Pittsfield, Oct. 28.—Private detectives rushed here from New York aided the local police today in their efforts to locate the woman who accompanied Joseph C. Newman and Philip E. Schwartz, local jeweler, to Springfield after the authorities discovered $100,000 worth of diamonds had been stolen from the safe in the Schwartz jewelry store at No. 90 North street, this city.

The police and special officers also are searching for a cigar salesman of Springfield, who is known to have made a side line of diamonds and to have been a warm personal friend of Philip Schwartz. So far as could be learned this afternoon no trace of either the woman or the cigar salesman has been picked up by the searchers working on the theft.

The diamonds were in charge of Newman, who had been a trusted salesman of the New York firm for several years and is well known to the trade all over New England. He brought them with him here last Tuesday in a large folder such as is used for that purpose by gem salesmen, and after displaying them to Schwartz asked the local jeweler to place them in his safe while Newman went to Springfield on business.

IN OUTER COMPARTMENT.

The safe, a large chrome steel affair, contains a double compartment, both inner and outer compartments having heavy locks, opened with combination turntables. The folder was too bulky with the forty-eight packages of diamonds it contained to fit into the inner compartment, so was placed in the outer

MOONSHINE CAUSES AUTO ARRESTS, JUDGE SAYS

Lawrence, Oct. 28.—The cause of a large number of reckless automobile drivers appearing in court is given by Judge J. J. Mahoney of the district court as "moonshine." The alarming increase, the court said, has been noted in the past two months, and the fact that operators are able to get the moonshine while on the fly at no set place and places is pointed out as an alarming condition in Lawrence. Joseph A. Boisvert paid a fine of $20 on a charge of operating a machine while intoxicated.

"If operators of machines were given to understand that their licenses may be suspended for one year after being found guilty on such charges," the court remarked, "there would be less of this sort of thing. I think that I will recommend the suspension of licenses in the future."

'COLORED FACTS TO CONCEAL SOURCES OF INFORMATION'

Department of Justice, and stated that he had never been able to add materially to the department's own knowledge.

Throughout the whole confession Rathom gave the impression that he was anxious to comply with all the department's suggestions, and denied that he had made any intentional misrepresentations, except for the purpose of concealing his sources of information.

The confession, which related to speeches and articles of the editor prior to February 12, 1918, was obtained from Mr. Rathom by A. B. Bielaski, then chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice.

EXPOSE FOLLOWS ATTACK.

It was dated February 12, 1918, and was made public in New York by U. S. District Attorney Francis G. Caffey at the instance of Attorney-General Palmer. Attorney Caffey's action followed the recent charge by Rathom that Franklin D. Roosevelt, as Secretary of the Navy, had condoned irregularities in naval prisons, exercised leniency towards men convicted of unnatural acts and suppressed important public records.

"The belief that the Providence Journal has specifically brought to justice any of these individuals creates an unjust impression and does take away from the Department of Justice the full credit to which it is entitled for this work," he says.

NO AID TO DEPARTMENT KNOWN.

"We sincerely regret that this situation has arisen and frankly declare that while we have presented a great deal of material of every kind to the Department of Justice we have never been able to state that in any specific case we were adding materially to the department's own knowledge of the situation, and we have aimed always to give the department immediately the benefit of any information which has come to us which we thought would be of any value to it.

"The suggested interview between Captain Boy-Ed and General Huerta in a New York hotel was printed by us in good faith, the entire material having been supplied to us from a source which we considered trustworthy. We have since ascertained, however, by conferences with officials of the Department of Justice, that it is doubtful if such a meeting was ever held, and that in any case no report of any such meeting was ever forwarded to the President of the United States. It came to our men second-hand.

"With regard to the activities and conviction of Consul-General Bopp in San Francisco, we did not have any representative of the Providence Journal in Bopp's office, nor did the information furnished by us, as far as we know, figure in Bopp's conviction, although we did succeed in securing and publishing a great many interesting details with regard to this case, not only through Canadian sources but through our own staff; nor was any of the material developed by our staff in this case furnished to the department, with the exception of a most important affidavit, the existence of which, as we have been notified only during the past few days, was known at the time to the department.

"With reference to the statement in my Boston address regarding the celebration of the du Pont explosion in Wilmington, participated in by Captain Boy-Ed and Captain von Papen, the apparent suggestion that the revelation of this incident had anything to do with the elimination of these two embassy officials is entirely erroneous and without foundation and no such suggestion has ever been made, with intent, through the columns of the Providence Journal or by myself.

"This instance was reported to us by G. B. Means, who was at that time in the confidential employ of Captain Boy-Ed, and in most of whose statements I had at no time placed any credence. The only corroboration I have now of this statement is the fact that Captain Boy-Ed and Means did make a long automobile trip together to Brooklyn on the particular night referred to. Every attempt of Mr. Means to get into communication with us and every specific and improper activity of his of which the Providence Journal or I ever had any knowledge was made the subject of immediate reference to the Department of Justice."

CAPE VERDIANS HELD FROM HOME VOYAGE

Deep gloom broods over a little group of homesick Cape Verdians today as the result of the refusal of the government to issue a license for passengers on the former fishing schooner Natalie J. MISSING

MISS ROSA DELIMALO.

Nearly frantic from failure to find her fifteen-year-old daughter, Mrs. Michael Delimalo, No. 26 Holworthy place, Cambridge, today appealed to the American to help locate the girl, missing since July 5.

The girl's name is Rosa. Her friends said she was unusually attractive, with sparkling dark eyes, black hair, a clear, white complexion and perfect teeth. She is about five feet three inches tall and weighs about 115 pounds. When last seen she wore an outfit of blue cape, dress and hat.

On the morning of July 5, the mother said, Rosa received a telephone message from a man who had formerly lived at their house, asking her to meet him. Rosa left the house to keep the appointment and has not been seen since.

Police of Cambridge, Watertown and surrounding cities have found no trace of the girl. Her brother Guy, a World War veteran recently returned from Virginia where he spent several weeks searching sections of that state where the man who had been paying her attentions was known to have relatives.

Rosa was employed at the Hood Rubber Company plant and drew a week's pay on the Saturday before she disappeared. The girl's father has been in ill health and his condition has grown worse from worry over her safety.

WOMAN SOUGHT IN GEM THEFT

by Schwartz. That is the last Newman saw of the gems for which he was responsible.

Then, according to the facts gathered by the police, Newman, Schwartz and the mysterious woman entered a brand new sedan auto owned by Schwartz, and drove to Springfield. The party was there for several hours, and according to the officers working on the case Schwartz left the woman and Newman together and went off to attend to some private affairs of his own.

The Pittsfield jeweler is known to have driven out the North Wilbraham road in his car, and to have sustained injuries in an automobile accident. The police here say that he broke a rib when his car collided with another a few miles outside of Springfield.

In spite of his injuries, however, Schwartz drove his car back to Springfield, picked up Newman and the woman and then drove back to Pittsfield, reaching here late Tuesday.

In the meantime, the police learned, the two clerks employed by Schwartz, Gilbert A. Semple, Jr., and Basil B. White, who have been cleared of all complicity in the robbery, attended to the routine work of the store until 6 o'clock, when they locked up the place and left, accompanied by Elliott B. Smith, an optician, who occupies a part of the Schwartz store.

DOORS LOCKED

It has been ascertained that the heavy steel door opening on the stairs which connects the jewelry store with the workshop Schwartz operates upstairs, as well as the massive wooden door in the rear of the shop, had been locked before the clerks left.

Shortly after Schwartz and Newman returned home Police Sergeant Stephen W. W. Monks noticed that the light over the show cases in the jewelry store had gone out. He telephoned Schwartz and was told not to bother. "I guess everything will be all right down there," Schwartz is reported to have said.

To Chief of Police Sullivan today Schwartz denied all knowledge of the robbery, or of any information which might lead to tracing the stolen diamonds.

Schwartz has been in the jewelry business here for more than fourteen years. He has been a sensational advertiser and has built up a large trade. Recently he christened his new store by breaking a bottle of champagne on the floor.

More than 600 members and visitors inspected the rooms.

MARTYR'S BODY LIES IN STATE

MacSwiney Funeral Service Held in St. George's Cathedral Amid Scenes of Emotion interfere with any of the funeral plans. During the crush about the coffin after the services the four men who had dramatically appeared wearing uniforms of the Sinn Fein army disappeared.

Requiem mass was celebrated by Dr. Cotter, bishop of Portsmouth, while Dr. Amigo, bishop of Southwark, pronounced absolution. The archbishop of Simla was present. There was an enormous crush of people in front of the cathedral as the hour approached for the service.

Those who had hoped to see Mrs. MacSwiney, the heroic widow of the dead lord-mayor, were disappointed. She had broken under the strain and was confined to her bed.

Shortly after 2 o'clock the mourners who had remained at the cathedral formed in line and the funeral march to Euston Station was begun.

Crowds began to gather about the church long before the hour for the funeral service to begin. Police guards lined the streets. Inside, the pews quickly filled. Sobs mingled with muffled exclamations of grief. The plain and simple coffin, draped with the Sinn Fein flag and banked with flowers, rested in state on a catafalque before the high altar at the head of the church.

It had been placed there by tender hands after the removal of the body from Brixton jail, following the inquest. A death watch kept guard over the body all night long, the warders being relieved at intervals of three hours.

Many men nightworkers visited the church after midnight and, being unable to enter, knelt in silent homage outside. Inside the cathedral members of the MacSwiney family sat through the night, occupying mourners' benches facing the catafalque.

The scene was one of tragic sombreness. Candles in brass holders as high as a man's head burned dimly beside the coffin.

ONLY DISCORDANT NOTE.

The only discordant note in the press comment upon MacSwiney's death and burial was sounded in the Morning Post. This newspaper printed a protest against the government's decision to permit a funeral procession.

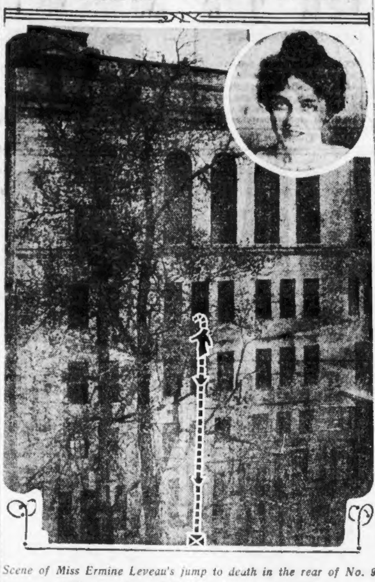
A second funeral service will be held at Dublin, where the body will lie in state twenty-four hours. It will be taken to Cork Saturday for burial on Sunday beside the Sinn Fein volunteers who "fell in action."

Arthur Griffith, M. P., "acting president of the Irish republic," announced that out of respect to the memory of MacSwiney tomorrow will be observed as a day of national mourning in Ireland. All business will be suspended. Only the essential public services will be maintained.

British Dismiss 10 "Black and Tans"

London, Oct. 28.—An intimation that the British government has begun disciplinary action to prevent further reprisals by soldiers and "Black and Tan" police in Ireland was seen today in the announcement by Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, that ten constables have been dismissed from the service for breaches of discipline.

Girl Suicide Was Watched



Scene of Miss Ermine Leveau's jump to death in the rear of No. 9 Ashburton place. Girl victim is shown in insert.

Since her failure last March to take her life, Miss Ermine Leveau, aged twenty-eight, of No. 352 Broadway, Malden, who committed suicide by jumping from a rear window of the fourth story of the building at No. 9 Ashburton place, has been constantly watched by her parents and friends, the police say.

She had been subjected to melancholy spells for months. Just before she took the fatal jump her fellow workers at the New England Historic Genealogical Society, of which she was assistant treasurer, said that she seemed to be in good spirits.

New York, Oct. 28.—Reductions in the price of plate luncheons and dinners, provided guests patronize specified dining rooms, have been announced by a group of New York's largest hotels.

This is one of the first big reductions made in the high cost of dining in this city, but is expected to be followed by others. The hotels and their prices follow:

SEEKS INQUIRY INTO SPECULATION IN GRAIN

Washington, Oct. 28.—The National Board of Farm Organizations is preparing a petition to Congress asking that it investigate the method employed by grain exchanges throughout the country. By speculating in futures the members of these bodies, it is alleged by Charles A. Lyman, secretary of the board which meets here today, are able to depress prices to the farmer and increase cost to the consumer without actually owning a bushel of grain.

September Morn "Had Nothing on Step-ma"

New York Oct. 28.—September morn in all her pristine and unadorned glory, had nothing on his stepmother, alleges Solomon Kahn, aged eighteen, in an affidavit presented before Justice Newburger of the Supreme Court in defence of his father, Leo J., who is being sued by his wife for separation.

Solomon asserts that on one occasion his stepmother told him not "to come until 3 a. m." because she was going to have some women callers. He did not return, he alleges, until 4 o'clock, and when he did so, he discovered his stepmother and three other women, a la September morn, in the apartment.

Mrs. Kahn is suing for separation and alimony on the grounds of cruelty.

Guests Sue Wealthy Host as "Drunk"

New York, Oct. 28.—An unusual law case came to light today in suits filed against Walter Clark, wealthy paper mill owner of Glens Falls, N. Y., by Folke Sunblatt, his wife, Mrs. Elfrieda Sunblatt, and Mrs. Ruby Galbraith Robertson for more than $50,000 for alleged injuries and loss of personal property incurred when they were Clark's guests in his yacht on Lake George.

The yacht caught fire and the plaintiffs claim they were forced to jump overboard.

The women also charge Clark violated the eighteenth amendment by having liquor aboard. Mrs. Robertson alleged she did not consent to go aboard until Clark had assured her he was abiding by all laws, especially the prohibition law. Both women charged Clark became intoxicated and unable to manage the vessel.

PROBE FOR POLICEMAN WHO HELD JUDGE'S CAR

Police Commissioner Edwin U. Curtis today assigned investigators to probe the case of Patrolman Malcolm Foster of the Back Bay station who recently forced John Mahoney, chauffeur for Judge J. Albert Brackett of the West Roxbury court, to leave his car without giving him time to shut the engine off and hustled him to the Back Bay station where he attempted to have him booked on a charge of drunkenness. The sergeant refused to book Mahoney and he returned to the Opera House where the judge's wife and party were forced to wait while he was taken to the station.

WORLD WAR VETERANS WILL MARCH IN MacSWINEY PROCESSION

BAND WILL RENDER DIRGES

Ex-Service Men Will Form Military Escort for Three Draped Caskets

Hundreds of World War veterans in uniform will march in the MacSwiney funeral procession here Sunday, the committee in charge announced today.

The ex-service men will form a military escort for the three draped caskets which will represent the coffins used in the actual burial of the Lord Mayor of Cork and the two companions who died with him on hunger strike in British prisons. A mass meeting of war veterans of Greater Boston will be held at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the American House to complete plans for their participation in the event.

The solemn high mass of requiem which was to have been sung today in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross was postponed to tomorrow at 10 a. m. Cardinal O'Connell will officiate.

NO PLACARDS.

Several of the division commanders who will assist Chief Marshal Richard J. Dwyer and Captain John J. Murphy, chief of staff, in handling Sunday's procession, have been elected at district meetings. They will meet with Chief of Staff Murphy at 3 p. m., Saturday, in the American House to receive instructions.

Irish societies throughout Greater Boston have cancelled all regular meetings and social functions to give their attention to the MacSwiney procession. The committee in charge has announced that Sunday's affair will be strictly a procession of mourning, and for that reason banners or placards will not be carried. There will be only one band and that will play dirges. The marchers will proceed along the line of march at a slow cadence in conformity with the funeral idea.

WILL WEAR CREPE BANDS.

Everyone participating has been requested to wear clothes of mourning, preferably black. The Minute Women, their president said, will wear a uniform of white trimmed with bands of black. Each marcher is to wear a band of crepe on which are colors of the Irish republic and a button photograph of Mayor MacSwiney. These mourning bands are of a standard design and are being made by the women of the Gaelic School and the Minute Women. Orders are being received from the district committees.

The various units will be directed by their leaders to Charles and Beacon streets, where the procession will assemble at 1:30 p. m. The route will be along Beacon street to Dartmouth, to Columbus avenue, to Park square and the Common, where an eulogy on Terence MacSwiney will be given by United States Senator David I. Walsh. Senator Walsh cancelled speaking engagements in the West in order to speak at the Boston exercises.

Arrangements which had been made for exercises in Faneuil Hall in honor of MacSwiney, tonight, have been cancelled by Matthew J. Cummings. This action was taken as a result of the plans under way for Sunday's parade.

MEET TO ARRANGE PLANS.

Timothy Donovan, president of the Gaelic School, has called a meeting of that organization for 8 o'clock tonight in headquarters, No. 2389 Washington street, to complete plans for participation in the MacSwiney procession.

James Culhane, who will command the Cambridge division, has asked representatives of all societies in that city who wish to take part in the demonstration to meet with him at 8.30 tonight in the club rooms of the Ozanam Council, Newtowne Hall, Massachusetts avenue, North Cambridge.

Among the messages of condolence dispatched to Mrs. Terence MacSwiney was that of the William Orr Branch, Friends of Irish Freedom. It read: "We, members of the William Orr Branch, Friends of Irish Freedom, express our deepest sorrow to the bereaved Mrs. Terence MacSwiney for the great loss she has sustained in a devoted husband and father and one of Ireland's greatest patriots.

"We pray God will give you strength and courage to help carry on the fight for which your loyal husband, Terence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork, gave his young life—that Ireland might live."

The same branch sent a message to Eamon De Valera, President of the Irish Republic stating: "Stand firm. Victory for Ireland cannot be stayed much longer by the murder of Lord Mayor MacSwiney by Lloyd George and his hirelings in America. We pledge you our sincere loyalty and urge stronger organization for the final fight for Ireland's independence."

GIRL'S FAULT IN DEATH; AUTOIST DISCHARGED

Testimony of witnesses in the Woburn Court today showed that Rose Melanson, nineteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvine Melanson of Middlesex avenue, ran in front of an automobile operated by John D. Wright of Wilmington on Chestnut street, that town, and received injuries which resulted in her death. Wright, arraigned on the charge of manslaughter, was found not guilty.

PLAN NEW BOAT LINE TO SOUTH

Industrial Delegates Learn of Scheme to Develop Boston as Port

Delegates to the fifth annual meeting of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts met today in the Copley-Plaza Hotel, and immediately took up the program prepared for them which included addresses by some of the most prominent transportation, insurance, banking and business experts in this State and throughout the country. The meeting will conclude with the night session tomorrow.

One of the features of the gathering was the presence of a number of business and professional women, who showed themselves intensely interested in the problems presented for discussion and in the solutions and suggestions made by the different speakers.

ANNUAL DINNER TONIGHT.

The program included luncheons today and tomorrow and the annual dinner of the association at the Copley-Plaza Hotel this evening.

Among the first of the subjects taken up by the transportation section of the conference was that of "Coastwise Service," and the delegates listened to an address in which John D. Hashagen, chairman of the association's committee, outlined a plan for the establishment of a new steamship line between this and Southern and South American ports. He pointed to the growing need for the development of New England water-carried commerce and declared that there is no reason why Boston should not get and keep its full share of this traffic.

Benjamin Campbell, vice-president of the New Haven Railroad, in an address dealing with the proposed new ten class scale, reassured the shipper of New England regarding this plan, showing the need for a change from the present six class scale in the official classification territory.

Probably the most prominent of the speakers upon transportation and traffic problems at the session today was Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and former head of the transportation committee of the National Council of Defense.

NEW TRANSPORTATION ERA

Mr. Willard declared that the nation is entering upon a new transportation era which dates from the passage of the Esch-Cummins bill, which he described as "one of the most constructive pieces of legislation that has been enacted during my generation."

A most interesting paper read by Albert H. Curtis, general New England agent for the Mutual Insurance Company, pointed out a new departure in the insurance field. This he described as brain insurance.

E. P. Osgood, manager of group insurance of the Aetna Insurance Company, pleaded for closer relations between employer and employed and showed how compensation, accident and health insurance had done much toward bringing about that desirable condition of affairs.

WOBURN K. C. OFFICERS INSTALLED TONIGHT

Officers-elect of Woburn Council, No. 77, Knights of Columbus, will be installed tonight at a meeting in Knights of Columbus Hall, Woburn, by District Deputy State Knight Richard McSweeney and suite of Concord. United States District Attorney Daniel J. Gallagher will speak.

"Mrs. Smart" Registers

By Kitty Parsons

Can you tell me, please, where the Republicans register for voting? . . . Oh, they don't! How funny! I should think they would have a lot of nasty fights between the two parties if they keep them all in the same place. . . . Oh, is it upstairs? What a nuisance! If they want to draw a big crowd I should think they would have sense enough to have it on the ground floor.

(Enters room where Registrars are seated) Oh, is THIS the place—how cold and bare it looks! They don't even try to have it look attractive, do they? * * * Thank you, I will sit down—stairs always do me up, after living in a hotel for so long, dreadful expense too—but when you can't get any servants what are you going to do—I'm certainly not going to scrub floors and things like that myself; I need my intelligence for better things—like voting—for instance.

YES, DEAR, YOU MUST SWEAR.

* * * * Oh, must I swear with my hand up like that—how amusing! As if I wouldn't tell the truth anyway—anyone who knows me at all would tell you that; I'm the most open mouthed person imaginable. * * * * Yes, that's my name—Louise Smart; most people call me Lulu so it looks awfully funny to see it written down there. * * * * Why, I was born in the West somewhere—you might almost say the Middlewest.

* * * Well, I'm trying to tell you exactly—isn't there a quotation that "some people are born great, some achieve greatness, and some come from Ohio?" * * * Oh, no—I didn't come from there myself, but the next best thing to it—right next door—almost,—in Iowa—such a pretty place too. * * * * Oh, let me see—I think it was called Squeedunk Mills; I can't see why they haven't changed the name by this time—so many well known people have come from there.

MY AGE? HOW INQUISITIVE!

* * * * My age! I don't see why that is really necessary; I read somewhere the other day that they had agreed not to ask women their ages and the percentage to come and register increased tremendously * * * Well, if you insist upon knowing—it's somewhere between forty and forty-five—two years younger than my brother Ned—I was the youngest in the family.

* * * * Yes, that's my husband's name—Harry for short; pretty name, isn't it? * * * * I don't remember where he was born—Oshkosh, I think. * * * Oh, no, he wasn't—that was my first husband; Harry was born in Kansas City—I remember hearing him say what a hot hole it was. Or was that my first husband—there's no use—I simply can't remember.

* * * * We've lived here for years and years—let me see, we came here the Winter after Charley's fat sister had the chicken pox—that must have been ten or twelve years ago—something like that; it doesn't really matter anyway; it was that year we had the dreadfully cold Winter—don't you remember—below zero all the time; I hardly had overshoes off my feet for five months.

BUSINESS—AMUSING HUBBY.

* * * * Of course I'm married—haven't I been talking about my husbands for the last ten minutes? I never heard such a lot of foolish questions in my life! How they expect to find out who we want elected by asking such ridiculous things is more than I can see * * * * No, I did not reside at that address last April—I was down in Florida. I got so bored with the slush and snow that I just—— * * * Well, yes, I suppose our residence was there—Harry was still there of course, if that is what you mean.

* * * * Goodness! I have so many occupations I can't pin my finger on any particular one; I motor a great deal and I belong to a number of clubs—and of course I spend a good deal of time keeping my husband amused—* * * well, call it anything at all you want; I'd call it sort of a social worker myself. * * * * Oh, must I draw one of those cute little cards—what fun! Like playing some sort of game.

Let me see: (reads) "The judicial power shall extend in all cases in law and equity, arising under this constitution, the laws of the United States and treaties made, or, etc., etc." How silly to stop right in the middle like that—anyone would know a man had got this thing together. I don't seem to be familiar with that quotation—is it from one of our own American writers? . . . You don't say so—I've never happened to come across it.

I JUST LOVE TO WRITE IN THESE BIG BOOKS

. . . Oh, is that really all! Certainly I'll sign my name in the book—I adore signing my name in big books like this—like a hotel register. . . . Well, I suppose I'll see you again in a couple of weeks—when I come back to do it again. I must say I think it's queer you never asked me who I wanted to vote for—I might change my mind again before the big day. . . . Oh, is that my pocketbook? Thank you—good afternoon.

ANSWERS MAYOR ON 2 PLATOONS

Attorney for Firemen Says Double Shift Plan Would Aid City and Men Alike

Thomas D. Lavelle, attorney for the Boston firemen, today made this reply to the Mayor's opposition to the two-platoon bill:

"The Mayor and the Fire Commissioner oppose the adoption of the two platoon system in Boston because of the great expense they imagine will come to the city if this question is favorably passed on next Tuesday. Of the merits of the plan, humanitarian, progressive and practical, they say nothing, thus, perhaps, conceding what has been made evident in every city throughout the country where the two-platoon system is in force.

"A few days ago the Mayor said that the performance of the firemen at a public demonstration could only be the result of a splendid morale in the department, a complete knowledge of their duties and a high sense of their responsibilities. Of the sincerity of this tribute to the Boston firemen there can be no doubt. They have never deserted their posts and have never taken advantage of any situation where they might be recreant to their obligations.

CITES HEROISM.

"The records of the fire department are replete to the last individual instance with the commendations given to firemen who have responded to alarms on days off, who have sacrificed meals and who have been quick at all times to submerge self in the protection of life and property. Is it conceivable that the men of whom the Mayor is so justly proud would take any advantage of the privileges which the two-platoon system will give them? The Mayor may well lay low the bugaboos that seem to alarm him if the experience of other cities with the two-platoon system means anything.

"The universal comment from public officials where the plan has been adopted is to the effect that it is a great reform, beneficial alike to municipality and to the firemen. Undoubtedly it will mean some increase in the fire-fighting force, but if this be an argument against it, it is more than outweighed by the benefits attaching. Alarms have increased in the city of Boston since the day off in three went into effect, but fire losses have decreased. Does this point to efficiency even if the firemen had not received the recognition of enthusiastic praise from the Mayor and the fire commissioner?

PRACTICAL ELSEWHERE.

"The two-platoon system has been made possible by act of the Legislature, and the Governor of the Commonwealth added to his official signature the hope that the firemen of Boston would have the advantages that his act made possible. It has been put to a practical test in thirty-two cities and towns in Massachusetts and in no one of these municipalities has any of the dangers that the Mayor exhibits as likely to follow the installation of the two-platoon plan in Boston ensued.

"The best guarantee of the fireman's future service, even if disaster threatens, is found in his record of the past. If two platoons are defeated, that service remains secure, if they are adopted, his sense of duty and responsibility will under all circumstances be the same."

REOPEN CASE OF SUICIDE BRIDE

Poughkeepsie Friends Act on Rabalsky's Charges Against Rabbi Louwisch

Rabbi Joseph Louwisch of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., today hotly denied the charges of Attorney Benjamin Rabalsky of Boston that he tortured Sheva Levine Louwisch, his immigrant bride, and drove her to suicide.

Attorney Rabalsky is uncle of the girl. It was in his house on Charles street, in the West End, that she hanged herself October 8.

"I did not abuse her to make her profess free love and Bolshevist principles in order to get evidence for annulment of our marriage," said Dr. Louwisch.

"She professed those shocking principles of her own volition.

"She told me of her lover in Russia of her own accord. I have done nothing not in accordance with American law and the moral law of my faith.

"To have lived with Sheva Levine would have been false to every fibre of my conscience. She is dead. She died by her own hand. May she rest in peace."

TO REOPEN SUIT.

While Dr. Louwisch was indignantly denying that he drove her to suicide, prominent Jews of Poughkeepsie were taking steps to have the annulment proceedings reopened.

This action followed a bitter letter from Attorney Rabalsky, saying the proceedings were irregular.

Attorney Rabalsky said the annulment decree was obtained on the ground that the immigrant girl was immoral, and he declared she had been forced to profess immoral beliefs by her husband as part of the plot to discard her.

Another important development was the statement of Mrs. Dora Hakow, in whose home Sheva Levine stayed just before the annulment action. Mrs. Hakow said:

"Sheva Levine a pure, sweet girl, girl, was brought to my place by a friend of Dr. Louwisch. This man told me she was a cousin of the rabbi. I believed it until I heard rumors that they were married.

GIRL FRIGHTENED.

"Then I taxed her with it. She confessed she was his wife. She said he had taken away her passport and threatened to send her back to Russia.

"The poor girl spoke no English. She was horribly frightened, and said she would do anything rather than go back."

To which Dr. Louwisch replied: "I will give $1,000 to anyone proving I used any form of suasion to get the marriage annulled. I never concealed my marriage, although I did not advertise it."

He said he thought the reason Sheva Levine committed suicide was that she was disappointed in not getting a large fortune from him when she arrived in America.

Attorney Rabalsky's letter, which reopened the entire case, declared Louwisch represented himself as a rich man when he was courting her by mail in her home in Odessa.

It concludes as follows:

RABALSKY'S CHARGES.

"After torturing her for many days and not giving her a chance to see people or leave a certain boarding room where he left her, and having people secreted somewhere in other rooms, he exclaimed that he obtained all the information that she was a believer in free love, and if she did not divorce him at once he would have her deported back to Russia on account of her statements and admissions.

"The girl first refused, denied all these statements, but after a torture of about three days I understand that she submitted to the signing of a certain statement and was dragged into a certain court, having no counsel to represent her, having no friend to take to—went through some sort of a procedure and was pronounced divorced.

"After that he forced her to leave town, saying that she must leave at once or be subject to deportation. She came to us on Sunday and did away with herself on Wednesday, October 6, by strangulation. Though the law cannot convict him, he committed a horrible crime against a pure and innocent girl who unfortunately happened to entrust her life to him."

FULLER'S CANDIDACY CAUSES SWIG TO BOLT

Simon Swig has resigned from the Republican Ward 15 Committee because he declares he cannot support Congressman Alvan T. Fuller for Lieutenant-Governor. In a letter to the committee he states that he cannot see his way clear to serve on the committee when he cannot conscientiously support all the nominees of the party. In giving his support to Warner, he writes:

"I have known Speaker Joseph E. Warner since his early boyhood. I lived in Taunton close on to twenty-five years and saw him growing up. He went to school with my boys. He served in the Taunton Common Council while I was a member of the Board of Aldermen, and he was a member of the Legislature at a time when I had the honor of serving the State. I know him not from hearsay, but from actual knowledge and acquaintanceship, and I have no hesitation in saying that Massachusetts has no cleaner, upright, conscientious, sterling American than he. He is a credit to Taunton and Massachusetts."

AGED WOMAN IS KILLED BY FAST EXPRESS TRAIN

An eighty-five-year-old woman, Mrs. Ruby Butman, was instantly killed when she was struck by an express train at Wollaston near the railroad station. She became bewildered when she saw the train coming and instead of getting out of the way stepped directly in front of it.

DEFENDER HITS HEAVY BLOW

Esperanto Blown 150 Miles off Course on Trip to Halifax by Head Winds

Gloucester, Oct. 28.—After having been blown 150 miles off her course by high head winds, the Gloucester schooner Esperanto arrived here to represent the United States in the International Fishermen's Cup races which begin Saturday.

The run out from Gloucester took fifty-three hours, twenty-four hours more than was expected.

From the time she left Thatcher's Island until within sight of Halifax the Esperanto was buffeted by head winds and head tides.

Just before making Halifax she encountered a furious squall which made things lively on the deck for a few minutes, but did no serious damage.

While not especially communicative, the crew of the American boat made it plain that they were satisfied by her performance over the 380-mile course to the scene of the races. All appeared confident of victory.

PLEASANT CRUISE.

The cruise of the Esperanto out of Gloucester was a pleasant one, notwithstanding wind and tide and the squall. Not one of the thirty-two men on board was seasick. All ate three or more times a day, and all praised the excellent food provided by [illegible], the veteran cook who presided in the galley.

The Esperanto was accompanied as far as [illegible] off Eastern Point breakwater, by the auxiliary schooner [illegible].

Two hundred men and women crowded the decks of the auxiliary, even climbing into the rigging, to watch the departure of the Esperanto.

On the way out Captain Charles Harty, for whom the Esperanto was built and who has had charge of the outfitting, took the wheel for the final [illegible].

He maneuvered the schooner in the mouth of the harbor for some minutes. Finally, a signal from the helmsman brought the [illegible] under the bow of the contender. Visitors aboard the Esperanto was speedily transferred.

When the transfer was effected the bow of the Esperanto pointed [illegible] with the wind until fifty miles off Thatcher's Island. The wind changed to southeast and she made the rest of the run from that quarter.

Her departure from Gloucester was a wonderfully impressive sight, as the fishermen and their wives bade her good-bye and good luck.

THOUSANDS ON WHARF.

Thousands of men and women lined the wharf stringers, sail stagings and roofs. Some even followed the departing schooner miles along the shore in automobiles.

Benjamin A. Smith of the Gorton Pew Fisheries Company, owner of the schooner, was much affected as he shook hands with Captain "Marty" Welch and left the Esperanto.

From the time the schooner left Thatcher's Island light in her wake not a sail was sighted until late Tuesday afternoon, when a "two master," westward bound, was spoken off the lee bow.

About 5 o'clock the same day Pilot Boat No. 1, the America, picked up the Esperanto off Chebucto Head. All hands crowded to the rail waving their hats and wishing Uncle Sam's champion luck.

At the mouth of Halifax harbor Captain Campbell, who had offered his pilot to the Gloucester schooner, picked her up and towed her to the dock. Had it not been for this she would have wasted two hours more tacking into her berth.

An enthusiastic reception was given the American boat and its crew. Mayor Parker represented the city. Commodore DeWolfe of the Royal Nova Scotia yacht squadron represented the Canadian yachtsmen.

HALIFAX GREETS THE ESPERANTO

Foe Looks Over Vessel and Admits Gloucester Crew Are a Likely Bunch

By BERT FORD

Halifax, Oct. 28.—The Gloucester schooner Esperanto, Uncle Sam's hope, was subjected to withering scrutiny by the foe today as she lay at Campbell's dock, which is to be her berth until the International Fishermen's Cup races, scheduled to start at 9 a. m. on Saturday, are completed.

Rooters for the Delawanna, champion of Canadian waters, trooped by the score to the waterfront to get a "close-up" of the Yankee schooner. They were impressed by the contender's trim, smart lines.

The Esperanto is no stranger in these waters. She is known to the majority of Nova Scotia fishermen, but many mariners and the public were curious to see her.

Seafaring men whose sympathies are all with the Delawanna, surveyed the American boat from stem to stern and from deck to peak. They watched Captain "Marty" Welch and his sturdy crew and admitted they were a likely outfit.

ARRIVED AT DOCK.

Skipper Welch brought his flyer into Halifax harbor after dark and made fast at 4.10 p. m. The Esperanto bucked head winds throughout her trip from Gloucester. She encountered a heavy sea Tuesday night and made the trip of 380 miles in fifty-three hours. She slipped off ten and eleven knots with amazing ease.

She was reported by Camperdown wireless station and a reception committee went down in a tug and towed her to the dock. Mayor Parker boarded the American schooner after she had been made fast and extended to Captain Welch and his crew the welcome and freedom of the city.

Skipper Welch's chief response was a hearty hand clasp. He is a man of few words and ready smiles. Captain Welch gave the Esperanto a tryout today while an interested gallery looked on from the waterfront.

CHANGE IN SAIL.

The Esperanto is carrying about 7,200 feet of sail and some changes will be made, particularly in her main topsail, which does not set just the way Captain Welch wants it.

About eighteen inches will be taken off, and she will be rigged tighter to the mast so that every breath of wind that comes aloft will catch and hold.

Whatever [illegible] there are in betting favor the Esperanto. It is regarded significant [illegible] the most enthusiastic supporters of the Canadian schooner demand even money. Yet both camps appear sanguine.

Wiseacres say the schooners are so well matched that there is little to choose between them and that the weather conditions and the seamanship of skippers and crews are to be the determining factors.

Word was received here that Rear Admiral H. H. [illegible], U. S. N., was coming on a destroyer to follow the race with naval observers.

The first friction between the Canadian and American members of the racing committee developed over the personnel to be carried by the American schooner. Men of the crew scheduled to sail on the Esperanto as guests are [illegible] to be barred by the [illegible] ruling of the Halifax committee [illegible] permitted [illegible] bona fide member of the crew can board either schooner during the race.

Mrs. Thomas Himmelman, bride of the youthful skipper of the Delawanna, gave her defy to the Yankee crew today when she said:

WIFE SAYS TOM WILL WIN.

"The Delawanna will win. It simply must win. How could it do otherwise with Tom at the wheel?

"Gloucester can't show Nova Scotia anything in sailing or fishing. Just watch the Delawanna."

The skipper of the Canadian challenger observed the first anniversary of his marriage on October 4.

Matters hummed at the dock of the Delawanna in Lunenburg. The last of the ballast was stored in her hold. Fishermen, dockhands and business men aided in the finishing touches that followed the early morning launching.

H. C. S. Maulbach, one of the wealthiest and most influential men in the county, was toiling as a common laborer. He is a graduate of Harvard Law School, class of 1896, and a keen yachtsman. W. S. Smith, head of the W. S. Smith Company, outfitters of the Delawanna, was also on the scene.

Today the Delawanna was sent away to Halifax amid the music of the village band and the waving of flags.

MONEY ON DELAWANNA.

Captain Himmelman and his crew worked like beavers. Captain Roger Conrad, first cousin of Captain Himmelman, who is to act as mate on the Delawanna, sailed on the Esperanto for seven months five years ago. He says he knows the traits of the American schooner. He added:

"She's a stout boat and a good one. There's no denying that. She's a reliable hard weather boat, a good dragger, but my hopes and money are on the Delawanna."

Captain Himmelman is so modest that he actually shrank from photographers and interviewers. Like Captain Welch of the Esperanto he is a man of few words.

"Who'll win?" said Captain Himmelman. "Why, the best boat of course. I don't like to brag any. Sounds foolish. I believe in doing a thing before telling about it and then, after it's done, not talking about it very much after all. Let the act stand for itself. That's my philosophy."

"Yep, I married a year ago this month and I have a great girl. She's more excited over the coming races than I am. She says I must win, and we'll do our best. I don't like to make any promises. It isn't safe. We never can tell what will happen, if you do your best.

"And we'll do that. We'll give everything in us to defeat the Esperanto, but please don't make it sound boastful. It's just a case of doing the part laid out for you. They're both fine boats and if the weather is right you'll see a tussle. We'll carry twenty-five hands all told, like the Esperanto. And may the best boat win."

INDIANA SWELL TOWARD COX

Democrats Hopeful of Victory, While Republicans Are Confident of Big Plurality

By Universal Service.

The Republicans are confident they will give the State to Warren G. Harding by a big plurality.

"There is a great swell towards Cox," said Samuel Ralston, former governor today. "We expect to ride in on the Cox tide."

TIDE IN SIGHT.

But that tide. It is in sight, all right, there is no doubt about it. But will the crest arrive in time to do Cox any good? Like an ocean wave it is taking its own time and cannot be forced.

The Democrats are very hopeful but one cannot sense an atmosphere of confidence around their State headquarters. They are working hard and putting up a stiff fight.

Republicans on the other hand, feel absolutely sure they will carry the entire ticket. They are not quite so busy as the Democrats. They say they have finished the heavy part of their work and are ready to vote.

"If there is an apparent slackening up of Republican activities in the State," they tell you, "it is because we know Indiana is all set, ready to vote, and has been for two weeks. The public mind is made up."

2 TO 1 ON HARDING.

At headquarters Republicans say Harding will sweep the State by 100,000. Privately they place the figure at 60,000. Some make it as low as 40,000.

Over at Stegemeier's Cafe you find that same thing. That is where much of the election betting is going on. The boards are plastered with bets of 2 to 1 on Harding. And they are not being taken.

MANCHESTER MERCHANT MARRIES STORE CLERK

Manchester, N. H., Oct. 28.—Leslie M. Folsom, head of the Folsom Dry-goods Company in this city, and Mrs. Mary P. Downing, who for some time has been a clerk in the store, were married by the Rev. Arnold Yantis, pastor of the First Universalist Church.

Cox Denies Wiggling or Wobbling

By Universal Service.

Dayton, O., Oct. 28.—"Every statement I have made in this campaign stands," said Governor Cox, answering questions concerning the statement made by him at Huntington, West Virginia.

"I am surprised that there has not been full appreciation that wiggling and wobbling has not been participated in by me."

CHASED BY MEN, WOMAN SAYS

W. C. T. U. Speaker Declares New Voters Are Besieged to Tell How They Will Vote

"I was never so chased by men as I have been within the last three months," declared the Rev. Sarah A. Dixon, pastor of the Union Church, Hyannis, before the annual convention of Women's Christian Temperance Union in People's Temple.

"I do not think that the men ever thought so much of us women as they do this year. Why, I have had one man chase me all over town, wanting to know how I was going to vote.

ESTEEM WOMEN HIGHLY.

"I am very glad that men are esteeming the women so highly in their civic power.

"When you vote, women, do not vote for the best looker. We women know how to keep a secret and are not going to tell how we vote. No man can be elected today by women who is mediocre.

"We stand for the party with principles more than for the nominee of that party. I don't care what Mr. Harding says or what Mr. Cox says and what President Wilson says.

CRYING IN ITS CRADLE.

"The American people with the help of women voters will see to it that this nation is advancing with moral ideas and that such an amendment as the eighteenth is carried out and that the Volstead act is not like a baby crying in its cradle waiting someone to take it up."

HARDING MADE FOES AGREE

Tells Heckler He Has Brought Johnson and Taft Together in Campaign

By Universal Service.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 28.—Senator Harding was interrupted in the course of his address here by a man who shouted: "Do you stand with Johnson or with Taft on the league?"

"As a candidate for President," said Senator Harding, "I don't ask Senator Johnson to agree with me. That is a thing I am rebelling against.

"But I do think I have contributed one service. I have brought Mr. Taft and Mr. Johnson closer together than they ever were in their lives before."

The candidate's answer to this question drew a rapid fire of queries from other hecklers, who asked for the nominee's views of half a dozen issues. A Socialist sitting in the front row was about to be ejected by the police for heckling, but Senator Harding called to them to let the man retain his seat and quiet was restored.

THOMAS W. LAMONT WILL VOTE FOR COX

New York, Oct. 28.—Thomas W. Lamont, owner of the New York Evening Post, in a letter to Edwin F. Gay, publisher of that newspaper, has announced that, although a lifelong Republican, he intended voting for Governor Cox because of the latter's stand on the League of Nations.

Summerfield's Prices Are Never Quoted for the Purpose of Mark-Downs, But Are Always Emphatically Fair and Just

In the circus method in vogue at one time in the furniture trade, it was the habit to quote prices for the purpose of a possible mark-down. These prices were in the main fictitious, and the customer was beguiled into the fact that he was getting either a "trade-discount" wholesale price, friend of the concern price, or call it what you will, when as a matter of fact in almost all cases he or she was paying more than the article was worth.

When SUMMERFIELD embarked in the furniture business in Boston, one of the main policies of the business was to stamp out these two price evils. How effectually we have succeeded you can judge for yourself, when in the space of eight short years we are now by far the largest house in New England selling furniture. Fair play has been our watchword, and you can be assured that nothing will ever tempt us to deviate from these lines.

When Does Water Boil?

The answer can be found in any school book—at 212 degrees Fahrenheit. Yet probably fifty per cent of the poor coffee that is made is due to using water that is not boiling. Many people think that water is boiling when it steams. But water will steam when it is only a little warmer than the air.

There are scores of other important facts about making coffee that you should know. Our little booklet, "How I Make Perfect Coffee," will tell you all about coffee and how it should be made. We will gladly send a copy of this illustrated

ACCUSES MAYOR OF SOMERVILLE

Collusion Charge Made at Hearing of Fireman Discharged for Refusal to Obey Orders

After an all-day hearing given John C. Newcombe, a discharged Somerville fireman, on his petition for a review of the evidence in his case at the public hearing held before the Somerville Board of Aldermen several weeks ago, Associate Justice M. E. Sturtevant continued it until next Monday morning.

SEVERAL WITNESSES HEARD.

Several witnesses were heard, including Mayor Charles W. Eldridge, President Richard L. Rice and Vice-President Hiram N. Dearborn of the Board of Aldermen; Aldermen James J. Shay, president of the Republican city committee; Alderman Fred J. Allen, Alderman William J. Bell, Hosemen Charles Frevort and Archibald Campbell of Hose 7, and Hoseman Lyle Sterling of Engine 4.

A laugh was created throughout the crowded courtroom when Alderman Bell, on cross-examination relative to his relationship with Fire Chief Sewall M. Rich, said that their relations are now delightfully neutral.

Attorney Albert E. Hughes, counsel for Newcombe, in opening for the discharged fireman, informed the court that he proposed to show that "this case is nothing short of a semi-political affair, a political collusion between the Mayor, the Board of Aldermen and Chief Engineer Sewall M. Rich of the Fire Department.

REFUSED TO WASH FLOOR

Newcombe was discharged because he refused to wash the floor of fire station No. 4 while ill with acute indigestion and also for disrespectful conduct towards Lieut. Walter H. Young of Engine 4, where Newcombe was an engineman.

The petition sought a review of Newcombe's case on the grounds that Newcombe and his witnesses were not permitted to be heard in defense when the Mayor first heard the case as presented by Fire Chief Rich.

Further that on September 23, the Board of Aldermen "did improperly, unjustly and unfairly vote to confirm the recommendation of the Mayor for the removal of the petitioner from his position in the Fire Department."

Society Ladies Adopt New Hair Curling Method

Since the introduction of the silmerine method in this country, it has become quite "the proper thing" among society women, who have readily adopted it in place of the destructive curling iron. The waves and curls acquired by the new method are far more natural in appearance, and the hair of course is glossier and prettier than could be if the life were goosed out of it.

The liquid is pleasant to use, being neither greasy nor sticky. It is a simple thing to apply with a clean tooth brush before doing up the hair. The lovely wavy effect in evidence in about three hours is all that one could wish for. It costs little to use liquid silmerine, as a few ounces from the druggist will keep the hair in curl for weeks.—Advertisement.

How You Can Make Hairs Quickly Disappear

(Helps to Beauty)

Even a stubborn growth of hair will quickly vanish from the face, neck or arms after a single treatment with delatone. To remove hair from arms, neck or face make a stiff paste with a little powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after about two minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be left free from hair or blemish. To avoid disappointment, be quite certain you get real delatone and mix fresh.—Advertisement.

Baldness Conquered

A veteran business man, who was almost completely bald and had tried tonics, lotions, shampoos, etc., in vain, came across an Indians' elixir by which he grew a complete crop of healthy hair he now possesses. The hair elixir is called "KOTALKO." Others—men and women—have reported remarkable aid to hair growth, relief from dandruff, cessation of falling hair by using Kotalko.

When Bald

In a vast number of cases, when hair falls out, the roots are not dead, but remain for some time imbedded in the scalp, like seeds or bulbs, needing only fertility. The usual hair tonics, etc., are of no avail. The Indians' method is purposed to nourish the hair and stimulate the growth. It costs so little to try Kotalko it would be a pity to lose the boon which this might bring to you.

Wonderful results reported. For men's, women's and children's hair. If you are bald, or losing hair, or have dandruff, you should try KOTALKO; it may be what's needful for your scalp and in such case it is a pleasure to observe the starting of new hair and its steady increase until prolific growth. You may obtain a full box of genuine Kotalko at any busy drug store. Or a proof box will be mailed if you send 10 cents, silver or stamps, to John Hart Brittain, Station F, New York, N. Y.

Is Marriage a Success?

Whether one agrees with Abdul Zefriz in the statement that man should be the absolute head of the family or not, the following letter from "A Man" is interesting and gives a very prevalent idea of marriage as held by many of the sterner sex, and not a few women. Very often a partnership in business of two men of unequal intelligence or ability results either in the stronger assuming control or the firm going on the rocks.

But, ah, the business of getting money lacks the one saving element which the business of marriage has. And that is love! Even "A Man" admits that divorces are caused by lack of love.

As to whether a girl should marry if she has longings for a career, it depends very much on the person. Some women have proven that their homes do not suffer by their interest in outside matters.

What do you think?

Read the following letter from "A Man"—and the others that follow—and then send in your own views or experiences on the question: "Is Marriage a Success?"

THE MARRIAGE EDITOR.

"Wrong Foundation" Cause of Most Marriage Failures

Marriage Editor:

I have read most of the letters in the American and many correspondents agree that our average American marriage is a failure. Abdul Zefris gives the cause of this failure in the plainest language of any writer. The American marriage is a failure because it is built upon the "wrong foundation." The correct foundation is for the husband to be the head of the wife and the wife to be obedient to her head (husband) in all things.

As I understand many writers desire a joint headship, or a 50-50 agreement which practically always ends in the wife ruling, for two persons never lived together for any length of time before one attained the rule over the other. A partnership, whether in business or in family life, can never hold together with two heads. A disagreement is bound to arise, which causes a separation. This is why in any form of government there is only one head, such as president or a king. In the last few years, or since marriage has become a 50-50 agreement, the number of divorces have multiplied. Surely, no one can say that this is making marriage a success.

Any woman who has ideals or a career which holds first place in her life should never marry. But what career or ideal could be greater than motherhood? Why does woman want to enter into a field that is not her own? What would you think of a man whose greatest desire was to do household duties and raise children (if it were possible) and boasted of such an achievement? Would you not call him a sexless man? Surely a woman whose greatest desire is to imitate man is a sexless woman.

Woman was created to be a helpmate to man. Of what service is a helpmate if the helper will not obey? A man is far better alone than with a disobedient helper.

The lack of love is the cause of most disobedience. About the only place you can find "love" or "obedience" in the average home is in the dictionary. The man just loves the woman and generally proves this love by gifts. After marriage the wife retains this love by her obedience. The average man will prove a good provider and lovable husband if the wife is obedient, and this will solve most unsuccessful marriage.

A MAN.

TOO MUCH SELF PITY.

Marriage Editor: I suppose you are greatly surprised to find a woman who has been married ten years who has no complaints to make, but that is quite true. The trouble with many of us is too much self pity. Take, for example, poor "F. L." Isn't it a shame that his wife will "wrap herself around" all those wonderful meals while he sits starving. My goodness, isn't she terrible? I believe the comic papers have taken too great an effect on his brain. People with weak minds should avoid such "literature." But "L. A. R." really has my sympathy. His wife doesn't seem to appreciate a good man if he really is good. I never condemn anyone from one side and men are strange beings. "They're only boys grown tall."

NEWPORT READER.

EAGER FOR SECOND MARRIAGE.

Marriage Editor: I am thirty-five years old and have been married for eighteen years and I call marriage a success in every way. I was happy with my husband for sixteen years and now I am spending my extra time looking for another real "pal." Marriage is a beautiful success if you have the right mate. I read "A Bachelor and Constant Reader" letter from Worcester and I think he would make a good husband for any nice girl. I should like to know a man like him.

A LONELY GIRL.

Marlboro.

ONLY PURE GOLD STANDS TEST.

Marriage Editor: The trouble with people that have unhappy marriages is in themselves. They are seeking for happiness a great many times in love affairs. Now if they were seeking happiness in God, they would be living pure, holy lives and could be happy. Only pure gold stands the test and after marriage we show whether we are pure gold or only brass. People should know that after marriage they must work many times harder than before. Everybody should know that before they start, and I will end by saying that we can't get to "Heaven on a feather bed."

TWELVE YEARS MARRIED.

Roslindale.

SHOULD BE GLAD HE ESCAPED.

Marriage Editor: The letter which is published in the issue of October 19, written by the twenty-two-year-old chap of Boston, who signs himself "Disgusted," prompts me to write and say what I think in the matter. I particularly wish to answer him, and sincerely trust my note will come to his attention.

His case is an unfortunate one—nevertheless, it should not be used as a criterion, in my opinion. Simply because his little love affair did not turn out right is no reason why the "female species" should be judged rashly. His lot would have been a great deal worse had it come to pass that he married this girl and she decided a year or so later that she did not relish the idea of having his mother live with them. I venture to say that her love for him was not of the "undying" kind—if it were she would not have turned him down for the reason he sets forth.

To my mind, so many marriages are unsuccessful because the couples do not understand each other. There is not a human being on earth who is infallible—we are all prone to be a little off color" at times, and if the other party would realize that a bit of humor goes a long way when the party of the first part is afflicted with a quarrelsome mood or, in other words, grouch, I firmly believe there would not be so many prolonged, disagreeable arguments which almost invariably are of the picayune nature.

THE OPTIMIST.

Brookline.

Marriage Editor: I am a young fellow of twenty-four, an orphan since I was six. I room out and eat in a restaurant. It's a tough life with nobody to love and no one to love you. I have often wished I was married and then again when I looked around and saw our noble young women of today with their painted faces I began to think I was better off where I was than married to one of them. I was fast becoming a cynic and more or less of a woman-hater. I like to dance myself, but lately I have become so disgusted until I read the leters of "Miss Optimist," "Twenty-two" and "Mary L." From their letters I am glad to find there are a few girls left with common sense, although their argument that the men encourage the painted dolls is a little weak. A woman can lead a man easier than a man can lead a woman, and I think that the sooner the girls come down to earth the sooner marriage will be a success.

A LONESOME BOY.

WOMAN THE KEYNOTE.

Marriage Editor: Marriage, like everything else, is exactly what we make it, and "Woman" is the keynote of the entire theme. To the pleasure loving, flattery craving, indolent, apeing, unscrupulous, jealous, club-ridden, movie-madd maternity-shirking woman nine times out of ten can the direct or indirect source be found for the wholesale number of divorces in this beautiful country of ours, and those of other lands.

I do not say this type of woman is in the majority, but the balance is quivering, and, oh, for a renascent period. A time when women were intensely, instinctively, sweetly domestic, bearing their large families uncomplainingly; deeming it a high privilege, giving themselves unreservedly to husband and home, keeping within their sphere. A house divided against itself cannot stand, and the reason so many marriages fail is lack of team work. Our eighteen happy years of marriage have been successful because husband and I early recognized our oneness. We have been true pals.

WESTFIELD COMMITTEE IS OPPOSED TO CITY

Westfield, Oct. 28.—The report of the committee on representative town form of government was filed today. The committee is of opinion that under a city charter the tax rate would increase and a political ring would soon be formed. The committee believes that the proposed city charter delegates too much authority to a few men. That it is comparatively easy to change from a town meeting form to a city charter, but that it is practically impossible to change from a city charter to anything else.

BABY INJURED WHEN THROWN FROM AUTO

A year-old baby, James, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Williams of No. 23 Underwood park, Waltham, probably received a fractured skull when he was catapulted to the street when the automobile in which the family was riding collided with another car. The accident occurred at Commonwealth and Lowell avenues. The police say the other automobile was owned by E. L. Price of No 63 Pine street, Milford, and was driven by his son.

Middlesex Divorce Court

Cruel and abusive treatment is the principal allegation made in seven suits for divorce which have been filed in the Middlesex superior court at East Cambridge. All of the libels are brought by women. Mrs. Ella M. Howlett of Newton sues Albert D. Howlett of Newton, alleging cruel and abusive treatment. They were married May 21, 1902.

Mrs. Maria Mello of Cambridge charges Manuel Mello of Cambridge with cruel and abusive treatment. They were married April 28, 1917.

Mrs. Hazel M. Burckes of Framingham sues Ernest S. Burckes of Framingham, alleging cruel and abusive treatment. They were married October 2, 1915.

Mrs. Sarah T. Mains of Cambridge sues Frank A. Mains of Cambridge, alleging non-support and cruel and abusive treatment. They were married July 8, 1914.

Mrs. Addie M. Ireland of Belmont sues Fred D. Ireland of Belmont, alleging non-support and cruel and abusive treatment. They were married November 8, 1904.

Mrs. Ella M. Small of Somerville charges George H. Small, now of parts unknown, with non-support and cruel and abusive treatment. They were married September 19, 1917.

Mrs. Emily Grindrod of Lowell sues Edward Grindrod of Fairhaven, alleging cruel and abusive treatment. They were married August 16, 1915.

VICTOR SEARLES IN COURT FIRST TIME

Judge Nelson P. Brown of the Superior Court gave a hearing in the judges' lobby on a motion of Sherman L. Whipple that oral depositions of Angelo M. Ellison and Arthur T. Walker be taken for use in the contested will of the late Edward T. Searles of Methuen. Judge Brown reserved his decision.

For the first time since the contest began Victor Searles, a nephew of the testator, who seeks to break the will of his uncle, appeared in court. Victor Searles, who was the next of kin of Edward F. Searles, was left a bequest of $250,000, and the testator declared that the legacy should be void if Victor contested the will.

IRISH-AMERICANS WARNED OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS SNARES

The executive officers of the Greater Boston Council of the Friends of Irish Freedom have issued a warning against the Democratic politicians who are now attempting to "whitewash" the League of Nations.

They quote the resolutions condemning the league unanimously passed by the national meeting of the Friends of Irish Freedom which met at the Waldorf Astoria, New York, two weeks ago. They also quote President De Valera against the league.

The following resolutions were passed unanimously on October 27, 1920:

We, the executive officers of the Greater Boston Council of the Friends of Irish Freedom, endorse the following resolutions passed by the national council:

"We, the National Council of the Friends of Irish Freedom, assembled at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, October 14, 1920, speaking as loyal citizens of the United States, for whose honor and interests our race has ever stood, renew and reaffirm our protest against the League of Nations and appeal to the American people to repudiate it in the coming elections, for the following reasons:

UNDERMINES U. S.

"First: The League is an attempt to undermine and eventually destroy the sovereignty of the United States and make it subordinate to a super-government controlled by the imperialistic powers of Europe and Asia, in whose councils England would have a controlling voice and influence; that the question of peace or war would, if America went into it, be decided by the Council of the League, instead of by Congress which, under our Constitution, has the sole power to declare war; that the surrender of this right would place in the hands of foreigners the power to use the armed forces and the financial resources of this Republic in wars for the promotion of other than American interests and would infallibly result in the ultimate destruction of our system of government.

UPHOLDS TYRANNY.

"Second: Article X. of the covenant binds all members of the league to preserve and maintain as against foreign aggression—a cunning phrase which would certainly be interpreted in their own selfish interests by the representatives of the Great Powers—the territorial integrity of all the other members of the league. This would compel the United States to send military aid to England to suppress an insurrection in Ireland, India and Egypt, and to Japan in a similar emergency in Korea or Shantung, if any foreign aid, even if it consisted only of supplies of arms and ammunition of war, were given to the people fighting for their liberty. Such aid to tyrants against oppressed peoples would dishonor the American people and bring indelible disgrace upon them. We are confident that in this matter we speak for many millions of citizens of Irish blood, and we warn the American people that no man or organization has any warrant or authority from citizens of our race to assert the contrary."

DECEIVING IRISH VOTERS.

"And we further wish to warn the men and women of our race in this country not to be mislead by the appeals of politicians who have denounced the League of Nations at every opportunity during the past year, but who now, for some reason that is not yet explained, have suddenly become its champions. Promises made by one of the candidates for President that if elected he will bring Ireland's case before the League of Nations are made to deceive the Irish voters and are an insult to their intelligence.

"Men and women of our race, a vote for the League of Nations is a vote for England and the international bankers. It is a vote for the nation that has murdered Lord Mayor MacSwiney, Michael Fitzgerald and Joseph Murphy!

"We, therefore, appeal to you not to waste a single vote, as every vote wasted is half a vote for the League of Nations.

MAYOR APPEALS TO FEMALE VOTE

Asks Defeat of 2-Platoon System; Urges Women Delay Early Morning Balloting

Mayor Peters appealed to the new women voters of Boston to defeat the two-platoon system and to delay voting until after 8 o'clock in the morning to give those who have to work a chance to vote first.

The Mayor accompanied his appeals with 100 facsimile ballots which are exact copies of the ballots to be used at the State election so that the women voters' organizations might instruct their members how to vote properly.

The Mayor said there was grave danger that many women would accompany their husbands to the polls between the hours of 6 and 8 a. m. and that the crowd will be so great that many workers being unable to wait will be deprived of the privilege of voting. Hence, he asks the women to wait.

He declares there is no sound argument in favor of the two-platoon system for firemen in Boston; that it will decrease the efficiency and increase the annual maintenance of the department from $500,000 to $750,000. In the best interests of the city, he urges them to vote "No."

CALL ON U. S. TO AID IRELAND

Irish Leaders Appeal to Secretary Colby to Protest Against Atrocities

Washington, Oct. 28.—Eloquent appeals for recognition of the Irish Republic by the United States were made to Secretary of State Colby by a committee of prominent leaders in the Irish cause who met the secretary by invitation at the State Department.

The petition presented by the committee also asks that the American ambassador at the Court of St. James be instructed to protest to the British government "against the atrocities perpetrated in Ireland by British military rule upon innocent men, women and children."

Secretary Colby, after hearing the appeal, thanked the members of the committee for their statement, but gave no intimation as to whether or not any action by this government would be taken.

The speakers cited precedents from the messages and documents of presidents and secretaries of state from the time of Washington and Jefferson to show that the United States had always stood for the recognition of small nationalities in their struggle for freedom.

They quoted also from the address of President Wilson himself to the effect that all the traditions of the government were in support of this principle.

Child Half Hour Old Goes Under Knife

Bloomsburg, Pa., Oct. 28.—What is believed to be a record in medical annals of the State was established here when an operation was performed on the youngest child ever on an operating table in this section.

The baby of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hillman was afflicted with paralysis of the left side at birth and the attending physician decided that an immediate operation might correct the trouble.

The child was just thirty minutes old when a piece of the skull was raised and pressure relieved, causing an end of the paralytic conditions.

The baby rallied nicely from the operation and is expected to live and to be healthy.

LEAVES $100,000 TO AID POOR

Brockton Needy Beneficiaries in Swain Will; Relatives Get Only Small Share

Brockton, Oct. 28.—David G. Swain, wealthy contractor and builder, who died in this city a week ago leaving an estate worth in the neighborhood of a quarter of a million, left one of the most remarkable wills ever offered for probate in Plymouth County.

Although Mr. Swain left a number of relatives in Nantucket they are remembered only by small bequests. The greater part of the estate is left in trust, the income to be used in aiding the deserving poor in Brockton.

THOUSANDS TO CHARITIES.

In addition there are scores of other bequests to personal friends Mr. Swain was associated with in business and in private life. Several charitable bequests are noted in the will, among them being $5,000 each to the Brockton Day Nursery, Brockton Hospital and Brockton Visiting Nurse Association; $2,000 to the Brockton branch of the Salvation Army; $1,000 each to the Nantucket Baptist and Methodist churches; $2,000 to the Old Ladies' Home of Nantucket, in addition to the real estate owned by him at that place.

Two bank clerks in the Brockton Savings Bank, for their courteous treatment of him, are remembered. One, Malcolm H. Norcross, receives $500, and the other, Ralph H. Peck, receives $1,000.

Other personal friends remembered to the extent of $5,000 each are: Judge L. E. Chamberlain of the Plymouth County Probate Court, Attorney Elmer H. Fletcher, former District Attorney Albert F. Barker, Treasurer William G. Allen of the Brockton Savings Bank, C. C. Crocker of the Brockton Savings Bank, the latter getting $6,000, and Mrs. Sadie Fanning.

REMEMBER FRIENDS.

Other bequests were: $1,000 each to Mrs. Hattie Fish of Nantucket, George F. Worth of Nantucket, a brother-in-law; Obed Wright of Nantucket, Scott Greenleaf of Brockton, Mrs. Rena McNeil of Brockton and Ruth M. Sackett of Brockton. Miss Edith Farrington of Whitman receives $2,000. Mrs. Ida Nelson of East Bridgewater is given $500. Thomas Hughes of Boston, an old business rival, will receive Mr. Swain's diamond ring.

There are nearly fifty other beneficiaries who receive various pieces of jewelry or furniture from the Swain home. Every single article owned by him is disposed of in some manner in the will.

The rest of the estate, worth approximately $100,000, is left in trust to E. H. Fletcher, C. C. Crocker and William G. Allen, the income of which will be used to help deserving poor in Brockton. The trustees are directed to keep a record of all money spent and all persons aided but are pledged never to make public a single name.

The will is to be offered for probate November 22.

"Dead Men's" Club is Planned for Veterans

Indianapolis, Oct. 28.—Agitation continues for the formation of a "Dead Men's Club," to be composed of ex-service men who were reported dead by the War Department and who have risen from the "dead" into the walks of everyday life. To apply for membership, George D. Dickson of New York states these qualifications:

"A cablegram states that I was wounded September 28, 1918, which was the case, but then they followed it up with another one saying that I had died from my wounds October 5, which I can assure you is not true. The insurance papers were forwarded to my mother for signature, but she failed to sign, believing me alive. Two telegrams from Washington then came confirming my death."

SHOULD A HUSBAND FORGIVE AN ERRING WIFE?

Should a husband forgive the wife who has erred?

Mr. Kenyon, whose wife confessed on the witness stand that she had had a secret love affair with Dr. Tetlow, whom she afterwards shot, says he will forgive. American readers are for the most part evidently of his opinion.

The Boston American has received the following letters from readers who were impressed by Mr. Kenyon's magnanimity. Men and women both commend him. Their opinions generally show the trend of modern thought, which is more liberal toward woman than it used to be. Then it was always the wife who was expected to forgive.

Read what American readers think of the Kenyon case.

SHOULD ALWAYS FORGIVE.

Editor American: Should a husband forgive? Yes. For years as men went wrong it was little thought of, but a woman was looked down upon. In this case, of course, the sacred vows of marriage were violated but the man who is a man has an abundance of principle. There is our old good book, the Bible, for not once or seven but seventy times seven, we should forgive, always as long as there is anything to forgive, out of the Christ-like heart.

Chelsea, Mass. A. C. W.

SAILOR'S POINT OF VIEW

Editor American:

After reading a lot of answers in regard to your question of Mr. Kenyon's action, please let me give my version of it. I have been going to sea for nine or ten years. And consequently have met scores of women in all walks of life. And have a fair idea of the morals of married as well as single women. And in the majority of those meetings with the married ones especially I must say they are not any too busy in keeping their marriage vows. It seems that their motto is, "When the cat's away, the mice will play." Now in Mr. Kenyon's case, I believe he did the right thing, but I do not think that he has visited many foreign countries or cities in them. Otherwise I am afraid he would have acted just the opposite.

A NAVIGATOR.

CAN BE HAPPY AGAIN

Editor American:

If the husband loves the erring wife and she begs forgiveness, and if there are children, he will forgive her and they can be very happy together.

My true name is well known to hundreds of people in and about Boston. Some time ago I made the horrifying discovery that the sanctity of my home had been violated. My wife confessed the whole wretched story to me. We have had a beautiful home life for years and our happiness has been increased by five precious children. My wife is a charming woman, who would attract attention anywhere since we have been married.

It seems that while I was away from home a certain animal in human form sought my wife's acquaintance through a mutual friend. After meeting her he began to press his attentions upon her with the devilish skill in which certain men are past masters. She was hypnotized or duped by his flattery and became another one of his victims. I did not learn the truth till months afterwards, for my wife soon came to her senses and refused to have any more to do with him. But the damage was done. What should I do? I admit that I had murder in my heart. But cooler judgment prevailed. Every time I thought of my adorable wife locked in the arms of this beast I saw red. Frankly I do not believe that you have stated the problem correctly. Is not this more to the point?

What should be done to the man who deliberately violates the sanctity of another man's home?

FRANK DOE.

Eye Specialist and Medical Author Report on Wonderful Remedy To Strengthen Eyesight

Say It Strengthens Eyesight 50% in One Week's Time in Many Instances

New York.—Dr. Smith, a well-known eye specialist, and Dr. Judkins, a Massachusetts physician and medical author, make the following reports after a thorough test of a popular remedy for the eyes:

Says Dr. Smith: "When my attention was first called to it I was inclined to be skeptical. But it is a rule of mine to give every new treatment a chance to prove its value. Having specialized in eye work for many years, I feel qualified to express an intelligent opinion on remedies for the eyes. Since this one has created such a sensation, I welcomed the opportunity to test it. I began to use it in my practice a little over a year ago, and I am frank to say that some of the results I have accomplished with Bon-Opto not only astonish myself, but also other physicians with whom I have talked about it, and I advise every thoughtful physician to give Bon-Opto the same careful trial I have, and there is no doubt in my mind that he will come to the conclusion I have, that it opens the door for the cure of many eye troubles which have heretofore been difficult to cope with. I have had individuals who had worn glasses for years tell me they have dispensed with them through the use of Bon-Opto. In my own practice I have seen it strengthen the eyesight more than 50 per cent. in one week's time. I have also used it with surprising results in cases of work-strained eyes, pink eye, inflamed lids, catarrhal conjunctivitis, smarting, painful, aching, itching eyes, eyes weakened from colds, smoke, sun, dust and wind, watery eyes, blurred vision, and, in fact, many other conditions too numerous to mention in this report. A new and striking case that has just been brought to my attention is that of a girl 12 years old. Two prominent eye specialists, after a thorough examination, decided, according to her father, that in order to save the sight of her right eye, the left must be removed. While awaiting an opportunity for the operation and still undecided as to its wisdom, her father was told it would do no harm to use Bon-Opto. In less than three days a marked improvement was noticed. At the end of a week the inflammation had almost disappeared, and at the end of six weeks the eye was pronounced saved. Just think what the saving of that eye means to this little girl! Another case is that of a lady 93 years old. She came to me with dull vision and extreme inflammation of the lids and the conjunctiva was almost raw. After two weeks' use of Bon-Opto the lids were absolutely normal and her eyes are as bright as many a girl of 16."

Dr. Judkins, Massachusetts physician and medical author, formerly chief of clinics in the Union General Hospital, Boston, Mass., and formerly house surgeon at the New England Eye and Ear Infirmary of Portland, Maine, says:

"I have found oculists too prone to operate and opticians too willing to prescribe glasses, while neglecting the simple formulas which form the basis of Bon-Opto, which, in my opinion, is a remarkable remedy for the cure and prevention of many eye disorders. Its success in developing and strengthening the eyesight will soon make eye-glasses old-fashioned and the use of Bon-Opto as common as that of the tooth brush. I am thoroughly convinced from my experience with Bon-Opto that it will strengthen the eyesight at least 50 per cent. in one week's time in many instances."

Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses and many who wear glasses will be glad to know that according to Drs. Smith and Judkins there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable remedy and many who once wore glasses say they have laid them aside. One man says after using it:

"I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for 15 days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eyestrain, caused by overworked, tired eyes which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years, both for distance and close work, and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now and have discarded my long-distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited in this easy manner. Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Dissolve one tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and use from two to four times a day. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little, it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE: Another prominent physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, the Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or misfit glasses. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto referred to above is not a patent medicine or a secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent. in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It is dispensed under guaranty by all good druggists in this city.—Advertisement.

G. O. P. PARADE STARTS AT 7.30

Mayor's Wife to Head Woman's Division Under Chief Marshal Channing Cox

Approximately 22,000 men and women tonight indulge in a real old-fashioned torchlight parade through Boston streets. Not in years, in fact, not since the first election in this century has Boston witnessed such a spectacle.

It being a Harding-Coolidge parade, naturally one cannot expect to gaze on the features of Martin M. Lomasney heading the division from the North and West Ends. But a surprising feature they can anticipate is Mrs. Andrew J. Peters, wife of Boston's well-known Democratic Mayor, heading a division of women. Be it known Mrs. Peters is for Harding and Coolidge, while Andrew pleads guilty to supporting the Democratic ticket.

This event is merely a feature in a big series of such things. If the rain ceases there'll be more than 22,000 in line, but rain or clear the parade is on with Lieutenant-Governor Channing Cox in the role of chief marshal.

START AT 7:30 SHARP.

Chief Marshal Cox is scheduled to give the starting signal at 7:30 sharp. Then for more than two hours marchers will pour steadily by the corner of Beacon and Arlington streets, the scheduled starting place. And during the course of the march twenty-seven bands will blare forth strident songs of victory, for in the minds of those marchers the election is already over.

This year for the first time in the history of the nation the women can take a serious part in the march and that which follows it on Tuesday next. Heading the women will be found, in addition to Mrs. Peters, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge and Mrs. Channing Cox. Both are confident of holding more exalted stations after next Tuesday has passed down into history.

When a bomb on the Common gives the signal Lieutenant-Governor Cox will head his army through Beacon street to Tremont to Scollay square, to Court to Washington to Temple place, to Tremont to Boylston and thence to Park square where the parade will disband. It is anticipated that the parade will require three hours to pass a given point.

NINE DIVISIONS.

In all there will be nine divisions, one of which will be composed entirely of women. Women may march as parts of other divisions, particularly where crafts or organizations are represented. So far as possible groups representing the same general line of business will march together.

Colonel John W. DeCrow, chief of staff, has announced that the flag of the United States will be the only flag carried. Flags of the different States of the United States may be carried, but in every instance they must be accompanied by the flag of the United States, of either similar or larger size. Universities and colleges may have their flags carried, but also always with a United States flag accompanying it.

Women, Here's How to Cast Your Vote

Arguments for and Against Acts Given

To vote on the following, mark a Cross X in the square at the right of YES or NO:—

Shall an act entitled "An Act to regulate the Manufacture and Sale of Beer, Cider and Light Wines," and in which it is provided that all beverages containing not less than one half of one per cent and not more than two and three fourths per cent of alcohol by weight at sixty degrees Fahrenheit shall be deemed not to be intoxicating liquor, which act passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 121 in favor and 87 against, and passed the Senate by a vote of 26 in favor and 6 against, and was thereafter vetoed by His Excellency the Governor, and failed of passage in the Senate over the said veto by a vote of 14 in favor and 23 against, be approved?	YES
	NO

To vote on the following, mark a Cross X in the square at the right of YES or NO:—

"Shall an act passed in the year nineteen hundred and nineteen, to provide for the division into day and night forces of permanent members of fire departments, known as the two platoon system be accepted?"	YES
	NO

To vote on the following, mark a Cross X in the square at the right of YES or NO:—

"Shall the act passed by the general court in the year nineteen hundred and twenty, providing for the election of a city council of fifteen members by districts, be accepted?"	YES
	NO

This is the fourth and concluding article in the American's series assisting women in properly marking their ballots.

The previous articles have, step by step, taken up all of the ticket. This article deals with the referenda on the ballot.

The first article is an appeal for the reinstatement into the public good graces of John Barleycorn. The referendum begins: "Shall an act entitled 'An act to regulate the manufacture and sale of beer, cider and light wines,' etc., containing not less than one-half of one per per cent. and not more than two and three-fourths per cent. of alcohol be deemed not to be intoxicating liquor etc. The rest of the article is explanatory.

If you vote "yes" on this by making a cross in the space opposite the word "yes" you vote to allow beer, cider and light wines to come back in the alcoholic percentages referred to. But even should the majority of the voters of the State vote "yes" the act would not be in force unless Congress repealed the Volstead act, in which case the act referred to in the referendum would automatically go into effect, not before.

If you vote "No" by marking a cross in the blank space opposite that word, then you vote not to allow any loophole for cider, wines and beer.

The second referendum in the fac-simile on this page does not appear on the Boston ballot, but does appear on the ballots of 49 cities and towns in the State. To vote on it follow the same procedure, a cross at the right of the word "yes" for an affirmative vote and a cross to the right of the word "No" is opposed to that.

Beer, Cider and Light Wines Problem Splits Interest With Two-Platoon Plan

The second referendum that does appear on the Boston ballot and on the ballot of nine other cities and towns is as follows: "Shall an act passed in the year nineteen hundred and nineteen, to provide for the division into day and night forces of permanent members of the fire departments, known as the two platoon system be accepted?"

To guide you in voting on this referendum it ought to be said that the Mayor of Boston, Fire Commissioner Murphy, the Finance Commission and the Good Government Association are opposed to the two platoon plan.

THIRTY-TWO IN FAVOR.

On the other hand thirty-two cities and towns in Massachusetts have adopted the two platoon system. The firemen claim that it gives a fireman a chance to spend the evenings at home with his family.

Decide for yourself and if in favor of having two forces of firemen, one working nights and the other days, instead of one force working night and day, mark a cross in the blank square opposite the word "yes." If opposed mark a cross in the blank space opposite the word "No."

At the bottom of the ballot is the third referendum and the last thing for you to vote upon. The act shown in the fac-simile is an act of interest only to voters of Westfield.

The act which appears on the Boston ballot is in relation to the so-called district council plan, and reads: "Shall the act passed by the General Court in the year nineteen hundred and twenty providing for the election of a city council of fifteen members, by districts, be accepted."

OPPOSED BY MAYOR.

This act is opposed by the Mayor of Boston, the Finance Commission, the Good Government Association and by all of the present city councillors as bringing back "boss rule."

Those who favor the act claim it will give the wards and districts more equal representation. City councillors are now elected at large, that is by the vote of the entire city. The district council plan would restore the election of councillors by districts which consist in some cases of two wards and in other cases of one ward.

To vote "Yes" mark a cross opposite that word. To vote "No" mark a cross opposite the word "No" where it appears on the ballot.

You have now voted on the entire ticket and all its referenda. Deposit your ballot in the ballot box and pass out.

WILSON MAY GET IN CAMPAIGN

Secretary Tumulty Says Startling Developments Are to Be Expected

Washington, Oct. 28.—Whatever the impression gained by the delegation of supporters of the League of Nations, received by President Wilson yesterday, it was made evident today that the statement on the President's physical condition represented the members' own conclusions only. Secretary Tumulty was emphatic in pointing out that the formal statement of the delegation, headed by Hamilton Holt, must not be regarded as sponsored by the White House.

In view of this statement it is considered significant that Secretary Tumulty said today that startling developments in the campaign might be looked for. This was taken by those at the White House to mean that the Democratic drive would be pushed with utmost vigor in the few days before election and that this drive might be assisted by one or more important declarations from the President himself.

Admiral Grayson, the President's physician, was equally positive in declaring that the President was stronger now than at any time since he was first taken ill.

When Admiral Grayson read the comments of the delegation, which said, "It was nothing less than tragic that the great President of the United States should have been brought to such a stricken physical condition," he declared the improvement in the President's health, while slow, had been steady and without relapses.

RUM PLOT SHUTS CHICAGO CAFES

Famous Cabarets Lose Licenses Following $1,000,000 Whiskey Scandal

Chicago, Oct. 28.—Mayor Thompson took a hand in the Chicago liquor fight when he revoked the license of the Coliseum cafe, all night cabaret, which is famous the world around. He had heard that liquor was being sold there. He also revoked the license of Friburg's cafe, another "bright light" cabaret.

known as "Mike de Pike," which involves numerous policemen, politicians, bootleggers and others in a $1,000,000 whiskey graft, has been placed in the hands of the United States grand jury. Speedy indictments are promised.

District Attorney Clyne refused to discuss Heller's statement. He said it is a matter for the Grand Jury to handle. Heller surrendered after officers had sought him for twenty-four hours. He is said to have named officeholders who were involved in three big liquor deals.

One of the deals was the $175,000 double-cross deal in which liquor that was sold to saloon keepers was stolen back through the aid of policemen.

Student Council to Meet

The initial meeting of the Harvard Student Council will be held tonight in the Crimson building at 7. A number of important matters are to be disposed of.

For Itching Eczema, Old Sores and Piles

"I guarantee my ointment," says Peterson of Buffalo, "to heal eczema, to stop the itching at once and any reliable druggist will cheerfully refund your money if PETERSON'S OINTMENT doesn't do everything I say it will do."

William A. Carter of Franklin, N. Y., is surely a wise man. He writes: "I used PETERSON'S OINTMENT on a little boy suffering terribly with eczema. It did the work."

Then there is [illegible], a brave fireman of Buffalo, who is glad to write as follows: "I had an old sore on my leg for many years. The best doctors failed. PETERSON'S OINTMENT entirely healed the sore quickly." And from over in Canada comes a letter from [illegible], stating: "The best thing I ever did for itching piles is PETERSON'S OINTMENT." A [illegible] box [illegible] 35 cents. Mail orders filled by Peterson Ointment Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.—Advertisement.

New York, Oct. 28.—The effect of the investigation into alleged graft and conspiracy to throttle building competition in this city threatened today to extend to other parts of the country. Belief was expressed that the American Federation of Labor may be forced to take cognizance of the inquiry now being conducted by a special legislative committee, but which will soon be taken over by the New York county grand jury.

GHOST OF SLAIN WIFE INVOKED

Counsel for Wanderer Says Woman, if Alive, Would Clear Husband of Murder

Chicago, Oct. 28.—The case of Carl Wanderer, on trial for slaying his wife, their unborn child and a tramp whom he employed to stage a fake holdup, will reach the jury tonight.

Benedict Short, leading counsel for the defense, resumed speaking today. In his argument he denied the state had proved Wanderer murdered his wife. He argued the testimony bore out Wanderer's original statement, that he had been attacked by a hold-up man in the door of his home and in the fight his wife was slain, after which he killed the bandit.

The ghost of the slain woman was the principal figure in Mr. Short's address to the jury.

"Wanderer's wife saw the gun or the flash and knew from whom the bullet came," he said. "Why, then, if the State's story is true, didn't she call: 'Mother, Carl shot me?'

"Instead she asked him if he was hit, too, that is the State's own testimony. It is the best we could ask. Would to God we could call the wife back from the grave to tell the story. She would clear her husband, and tell the world and the jury that he loved her unto death."

Marmola Prescription Tablets may now be obtained at all drug stores, or by writing direct to the Marmola Co., 92 Garfield Building, Detroit, Mich., and their reasonable price—one dollar for a good size box—leaves no excuse for dieting or violent exercise for the reduction of the overfat body to normal proportions.

MOOSE AT THEATRE PARTY TO HONOR "AL" BENSON

Members of the Boston Lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, will give a theatre party tonight at Gordon's Olympia Theatre, Chelsea, to one of their most popular lodge members, "Al" Benson, noted motion picture theatre singer. The lodge members will meet at Chelsea square at 7:30 o'clock and will march in a body to the theatre. As the guest of honor, Benson will have a prominent place in the parade. The chairman of the entertainment committee will have tickets for all lodge members. These tickets will be issued before the parade starts.

A. E. Abbott, dictator of the lodge, will be in charge of the theatre party. The event is a tribute to the esteem in which Benson is held by his brother Moose. He has long been prominent in the affairs of the Boston lodge and has generously given of his services as an entertainer at all lodge social functions.

TELLS DYSPEPTICS WHAT TO EAT

Avoid Indigestion, Sour Acid Stomach, Heartburn, Gas on Stomach, Etc.

Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble, say medical authorities, are due nine times out of ten to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. Chronic "acid stomach" is exceedingly dangerous and sufferers should do either one of two things.

Either they can go on a limited and often disagreeable diet, avoiding foods that disagree with them, that irritate the stomach and lead to excess acid secretion or they can eat as they please in reason and make it a practice to counteract the effect of the harmful acid and prevent the formation of gas, sourness or premature fermentation by the use of a little Bisurated Magnesia at their meals.

There is probably no better, safer or more reliable stomach antacid than Bisurated Magnesia and it is widely used for this purpose. It has no direct action on the stomach and is not a digestant. But a teaspoonful of the powder or a couple of five grain tablets taken in a little water with the food will neutralize the excess acidity which may be present and prevent its further formation. This removes the whole cause of the trouble and the meal digests naturally and healthfully without need of pepsin pills or artificial digestants.

Get a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia from any reliable druggist. Ask for either powder or tablets. It never comes as a liquid, milk or citrate and in the bisurated form is not a laxative. Try this plan and eat what you want at your next meal and see if this isn't the best advice you ever had on "what to eat."—Advertisement.

PORTSMOUTH FIREMEN DEDICATE NEW BUILDING

Portsmouth, N. H., Oct. 28.—Portsmouth Fire Department dedicated the new Central Fire Station for which the men have been fighting for twenty-five years. Every company, with the exception of Engine 3, is now located in the new quarters on Court street. The building was erected at the cost of over $85,000.

The exercises included a parade of the entire department and apparatus, followed by the raising of a flag, the gift of C. E. Currier & Company of Boston, who constructed the building. An alarm from Box 53 in the business section called the entire department to Market square here an exhibition was given by the modern and old apparatus. Hundreds of spectators watched the work and applauded the firemen. A banquet was held in the evening following a fine illumination from the roof of the station.

ADAMS FIREMAN ARRESTED FOR DRIVING TOO FAST

Adams, Oct. 28.—Howard Kaiser, driver of the fire truck, may drive fast when using the truck but must go slower when driving a touring car to the place where the fire truck is kept when an alarm of fire has been sounded. Shaw in the local court discharged Kaiser after warning him not to drive so fast in the future.

MEN AND WOMEN DRINK AT TABLES IN BOSTON CAFES

HIGHBALLS FREELY PASSED UNDER EYES OF POLICE

Is there a place in Boston where a man or woman may go, sit down at a table and buy liquor?

The investigator determined to find out. He did. The answer is emphatically yes. There is such a place.

It should [illegible] in this connection that the investigator [illegible] looked [illegible] Boston made no attempt [illegible] likely spots [illegible] will be shown [illegible] take advantage [illegible] ties offered him of buying liquor.

To have attempted [illegible] of places in Boston [illegible] investigator was [illegible] acquaintances that liquor might be had would have [illegible] period that [illegible] weeks.

To have attempted to purchase all the liquor [illegible] offered to secure for him would have required the financial backing of a wealthy man.

LEAST LIKELY PLACES

He therefore chose such places as seemed least [illegible] character [illegible] places where liquor might be bought and bought [illegible] with the utmost ease [illegible] in this supposedly dry city.

When, therefore, he sought the answer to the question propounded above he chose a cafe within a stone's throw of the City Hall [illegible] police station where he had heard from acquaintances liquor might be bought.

He entered [illegible] a stranger. There he purchased whiskey [illegible] $8 per pint. Furthermore [illegible] mixing it with ginger [illegible] from the waitress from whom he bought the [illegible]

The place was well filled with customers when the investigator made his purchase. There was no attempt at concealing the sale [illegible] at concealing the consumption of the liquor.

How did the investigator go about it?

He went in, removed his hat and seated himself at a table [illegible] visible from all portions of the room. The waitress approached and asked for his order.

$8 FOR A PINT.

"Ginger ale, unless I can get something stronger," he said.

The waitress shook her head, hesitated a moment and then in a low voice said:

"I can get you a [illegible] What will [illegible] have [illegible]?"

The investigator [illegible] He was [illegible] $8 [illegible]

[illegible]

NOT THE ONLY ONE.

It soon became apparent that the investigator was not the only one present in possession of liquor. And very apparently many of the other customers had brought theirs with them.

A woman at the next table [illegible] pint bottle [illegible] ginger ale [illegible] A party of two men [illegible] a few feet away [illegible] whiskey, [illegible] and without concealment.

[illegible] woman at the next table grew [illegible] loudly informed the investigator that he was profaneay [illegible] He called her attention to the fact that the [illegible] bottle he had purchased was empty.

[illegible] she could [illegible] the investigator she opened her [illegible] and drew forth a pint of whiskey.

"I got [illegible]," she declared, [illegible] the price of it."

"Of course," she added confidentially, "I don't usually sell it. I keep it to give away to my friends—but I don't know you."

When she saw that the investigator was counting [illegible] she [illegible] the [illegible]

"Of course [illegible]" she said.

And she [illegible]

In reply to [illegible] that there are [illegible] purchased.

"Sure. But [illegible] have to be known [illegible] them hard [illegible] place [illegible] they gave me [illegible] leads [illegible] the name of a cafe [illegible] district."

To substantiate [illegible] the investigator [illegible] mentioned. He [illegible] and slightly [illegible] said [illegible] drinks [illegible] provided the investigator [illegible]

In search of [illegible] served the investigator [illegible] taxicab. The driver [illegible] knowing two places [illegible] were drinks [illegible] the investigator [illegible]

Asked to [illegible] the places he had [illegible] he said: "Say, I'm driving [illegible] committing murder. This stuff is so bad I wouldn't drink it myself. If you want good stuff go to the Back Bay."

Unaided by [illegible] the truthful taxi driver the investigator went to several saloons in the North Station.

In the second [illegible] the investigator's request for liquor was apparently ignored.

In the third bar the investigator was eyed suspiciously and then refused. [illegible] with the certainty [illegible] customers were drinking distilled liquids.

Shorty runs into "Snapper" Teebo!

Atlanta, Ga.
Wednesday

Dear Petey:

Checked up our old dormitory pal "Snapper" Teebo this morning while waiting on an appointment down Peachtree St. "Snap" wanted to know a bucketfull about my visit to the Camel factories. "Tell us, old apple seed," says Snapper, "you're on the inside!" "Snapper" still has that mighty annoying way of saying: "But that doesn't surprise me!" Pete, someday I'll soak him. Maybe that will be a surprise!

Anyhow—when I explained about the millions of Camels R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. made daily, what does the old bird sputter but:-" Why—Shorty, they'd have to make that many to supply the demand! Camels have the quality smokers want! And they have the most wonderful mellow mild body and the most refreshing flavor ever created in a cigarette! Of course they make Camels by millions; of course they buy enough revenue stamps from 'Uncle Sam' every work-day to build a duplicate of the Winston-Salem post office! Why not? Smokers insist on Camels!"

Then "Snap" got to spilling some real Camel selling stuff! "Shorty," says he, "write the Reynolds folks for me that I travel and talk some with the world in a year. And, I want you to put it on record that in all the times I've pulled Camels out of my pocket to supply somebody's shortage; I've heard enough fine things said about 'em to fill a fat volume! 'That's my brand', 'Camels are a wonderful cigarette'; 'Gee, but this is like getting money from home', etc."

"And, Shorty, what's the answer? Why—Camels blend of choice Turkish and choice Domestic tobaccos meets the universal taste! That's it! Now, get me right—they ALL open their shutters for Camels! You'll find that all over the nation! And, that's the 'hole' story, old golf ball!"

Pete, you pet phonograph, did you ever hear a better record?

Sincerely Shorty.

FIGHT MAY BE FINISH AFFAIR

Sudden Switch From NewYork Causes Great Surprise in Boxing Circles

New York, Oct. 28.—The big fight goes to Havana.

This is the story of promoters Rickard, Cochran and Brady, who are about to sign Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier, and they are sticking to it.

Some of the second guessers, however, are calculating today that the Havana angle is somewhat of a tropical myth and that in the end the fight will be staged right here in little old New York as originally intended and where it is sure the attraction would draw a million dollars.

SWITCH A SURPRISE.

The sudden switch to Havana came as somewhat of a surprise. The promoters got together late Wednesday to reconsider the articles and make arrangements to pacify Jack Kearns, who objected to the phraseology of the contracts in some spots.

This little matter was attended to promptly and Kearns is now ready to autograph the documents at any time and place named by Messrs. Rickard, Brady and Cochran.

But the Havana angle!

It is said a [illegible] syndicate, which [illegible] the promoters to change their plans [illegible] offer that [illegible] be refused [illegible] what [illegible] developed.

Another [illegible] for the sudden switch may be with the New York State Boxing Commission. The commission has not been partial to heavyweight attractions, and it is just possible that the boxing body informed the promoters that they would save time and trouble by making plans to stage the world's heavyweight championship somewhere else.

SIGN ARTICLES TODAY.

There is no direct evidence that this was the case, but it is possible. The time and place for signing the articles of agreement [illegible] will be set by the promoters today.

Carpentier and Descamps are eager to sign and get it over with, and Dempsey and Kearns are ready now that objectionable clauses in the articles have been revamped.

CAVANAUGH BOOSTS GEORGETOWN ELEVEN

"There probably are not three football teams in the country that can defeat Georgetown," asserts Frank Cavanaugh. "I say that there probably are not three elevens that can whip the Southerners. I might qualify it by saying that no team might be able to turn the trick.

"Their line is heavy and charges fast, while the backfield is exceptionally strong, one player being better than the other and so on, with Ward at fullback the star of them all."

LAITINEN DEFEATS JOHNSON IN 2 FALLS

Springfield, Oct. 28.—Amos Laitinen won in straight falls over Hilmer Johnson, the [illegible] famous [illegible] completely baffling the latter. The first fall came in twenty-nine minutes twenty seconds with a head chancery and the second in nine minutes with a head chancery and body scissors.

Mitchell Boys Win

The Mitchell Military Boys' School second eleven of Billerica easily defeated the McAllister School team of Concord, 13 to 0, at Billerica. All the scoring was done in the first half.

Up to Commission to Encourage Boxers

By JACK CONWAY.

The Boxing Commission has made an excellent showing in eliminating many of the old evils connected with the ring game. It has punished clubs and boxers who have failed to keep faith with the public.

This was the first step which had to be taken in the purification of any sport. The clubs, managers and boxers now realize that Messrs. Foote, Buckley and Barrett don't intend to stand for any small town work by anybody connected with the fistic game.

With the house cleaning work progressing smoothly, the commission should now turn its attention to the upbuilding of the game.

When the commission took charge of affairs it found itself in much the same position as the man who buys an apartment house with [illegible] repair. So the new owner [illegible] the rotten parts. He would still have a mighty poor house if he [illegible] place them with new parts. Therefore, he goes out into the open market and secures those things which are necessary to put his property into good repair.

Should Aid in Developing Talent

The Boxing Commission should now do something of a constructive nature to develop new talent. There are fewer boxes [illegible] in Massachusetts rings today than was the case before the commission took charge of affairs. [illegible] what is the reason for this condition of affairs.

The answer is that a boy who has never [illegible] is obliged to pay as much for a license as Jack Dempsey. All boxers must pay $[illegible] to the Commission for a license before they can take part in a contest.

We are not writing a brief for star ring men who can well afford to pay $2 for a license. We [illegible] however, it is an injustice [illegible] ask [illegible]

[illegible]

Smaller Fees for Novice Boxers

[illegible] special novice licenses to preliminary boys. These lads shouldn't be called upon to pay more than $1 for the privilege of boxing. When they have graduated from the novice class and are in a position to make real money in the ring, then they could be asked [illegible] fee.

As a Woman Thinketh

By HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright, 1920, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

HOW times have changed!

It seems only yesterday

That I inveighed bitterly against "The Curse of the Bachelor Flat"—in these very columns!

Since I declared that "the girl who marries a widower may be "number two," but the girl who marries a man who has kept bachelor flat is number thirty-two!

That she misses half the joy and all the ecstasy and excitement of "domesticating" him

That he has been spoiled, petted, pampered and fed up with little feminine attentions until there is not a single novelty nor a brand new thrill left for him.

That, as long as a lone man lives in a boarding house, a hotel or a club, nobody feels sorry for him

But the moment he acquires a "bachelor apartment," all the sweet young things begin to "mother" him and "sister" him and coddle him

To fight for the privilege of darning his socks, sewing on his buttons, presiding at his teas, showing him how to cook, and making life one long, pleasant dream for him

In short, that fireless cookers, electric dish washers, laundries that "do your mending" and the BACHELOR FLAT

Are the modern enemies of love and marriage and romance!

And now, LOOK at how things have changed!

In these days, when the college professor is seeking a job as farmhand—and the farmer drives a limousine.

When the maid dictates her terms, and the mistress has to furnish "references."

And when every other bride you meet is holding a job down town, and doing her own housework up town

A husband who has kept house in a bachelor flat is a BLESSING straight from the hand of Providence!

He may not have many illusions but never has he any beautiful hallucinations, that Home is going to resemble Heaven!

He KNOWS that there are such things as iceman and milkmen and butchers and profiteers, and bills—and they don't grate on his finer sensibilities

And, oh sweetest thought of all he is not too PROUD to work!

When the cook leaves in the middle of a meal, he feels it no insult and degradation to his manhood to tie a gingham apron around his corpulent middle and help wash and dry the dishes

When you happen to be delayed down town by a traffic tie-up, he will cheerfully and efficiently start the dinner and set the table,

Instead of lashing and growling around the house until you come in

He can stuff things and tell you when they are boiling

When you have a headache, or need your beauty sleep, he doesn't mind getting up, making his own coffee and tiptoeing quietly off to work.

And when EVERYTHING goes wrong, he can tumble quite comfortably onto a couch or into an unmade bed, and sleep soundly and serenely.

He is USED to unmade beds, and an upset house, and a gypsy "canteen."

All life is one long, carefree picnic to HIM!

He is a domestic soldier of fortune, bless him—and the only thing on earth that makes him uncomfortable is to find things "all set"!

Best of all, he is NOT a spoiled darling, fresh from the hands of his doting Mother!

He has been out of Mama's "glass case" long enough to grow up, and behave like a BIG boy, instead of weeping or pouting when his chop is overdone or his eggs are cooked a minute too long!

In short, he is a responsible human being, used to life's vicissitudes—tried by the fire of the Bachelor Flat!

Blessed be the BACHELOR FLAT!

The Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

WHEN Adolphus got his schooling he was lazy, he was sly, and his chiefest joy was fooling teacher's ever watchful eye. He was very gay and smirking days when he could crib his Greek, but when the teacher kept him working then he almost died of pique. Adolph had no use for grammar and still less for Latin prose, and he longed to use a hammer on the themes he must compose. 'Dolphus' doleing ne'er diminished and he made a grade each Spring [illegible] when Adolphus finished he knew naught of anything! All through life, Adolphus' labors have been fashioned on this plan; he has cribbaged from his neighbors, and is now an also-ran. He has always been most nimble, shirking toil with right good will but his brains, put in a thimble, would have room [illegible] And the trouble with this fellow isn't just that he's a [illegible] that his scheme of life is yellow, that his morals are not neat, though Adolphus does not know it, nor do others of his kind everything he does will show it he is blinder than the blind! He has not one chance of beating life's a game that's on the square, and the chap whose aim is cheating [illegible] was so wily that [illegible] on, and he managed things so slyly he was sure that he had won. But poor 'Dolph is sadly lacking, though he is a cunning elf, not to see that all this slacking cheats nobody but himself.

ABOUT OUR GOOD FRIEND

Porter

Copyright, 1920, by The Ledger Syndicate

PORTER

VARIATIONS — Durward, Dorman, Doman, Doorman.

RACIAL ORIGIN—Norman-French and Anglo-Saxon.

SOURCE—An occupation.

AS might be suspected, the family name of Porter had its origin in the occupation of porter. Title, however, would really be a better term than occupation, for in the Middle Ages, under the Norman French feudal system of military social organization, the porter was a person of military importance

In those days the word had none of its modern meaning. The porter was not a bearer of burdens. He was the military officer in charge of the guard at the gate, or "port," of the castle. The Anglo-Saxon equivalens of this title were "dore-ward" and "doreman" (door-ward and door man), and family names developed from them are frequently met with

But the name of Porter is far more widespread today than the others, and there is a reason. There was a period of two centuries or more in England in which the Norman conquerors spoke only French, the language which they brought across the channel with them, and Anglo Saxon was spoken by the conquered population. The nobility, of course, was almost without exception of the former race. Hence in the castles, where the porters' duties lay, only French was spoken, and naturally the French title prevailed. Later, of course, owing to the political severance of Normandy from England, the two tongues combined into a mixture that was basically Anglo-Saxon and from which modern English was developed. But by that time the word "porter" had become thoroughly fixed.

The name was, of course, purely descriptive at first, and it is found in the old records in the form, "Nicholas le Porter."

Tomorrow—Sherman.

The Man Who Can't Make Love

HE THINKS FAR TOO MUCH OF HIMSELF

By Beatrice Fairfax

An Authority on the Problems of Girls and on Questions of Love and Romance.

HE signs his letter "Bitterly Yours One Who Intends to Stay a Bachelor." And the letter is bitter enough in all faith. Let's set part of it down where we can study it

I am twenty-six and make some three thousand a year. I have no bad habits and have a fairly good bank account. I might be able to give any girl a good home. BUT I cannot dance. I cannot take a girl to the park and bill and coo with her. I cannot make up any beautiful poetry like Francois Villon's in McCarthy's story "If I Were King." I do not wear flashy ties nor fancy shoes. My hands are not white and soft, but hardened and scratched from the work I do. I am of a cold unpoetic nature and I cannot tell a girl I would go to the end of the world and beyond for her.

"Result—two broken engagements and two proposals of marriage turned down in the last three years. All the girls in the case are married to good dancers with empty pockets and a gift for making pretty speeches.

"I am turned down because I can only give a girl a home and love and honor a woman in my heart without telling it to her in quotations from Shakespeare and Byron."

Now let's talk to the young man who throws out his chest and says

"I AM OF A COLD, UNPOETIC NATURE AND CANNOT TELL A GIRL I WOULD GO TO THE END OF THE WORLD AND BEYOND FOR HER."

Young man, listen to me. When it suits you in writing to a stranger whose sympathy you wish to enlist you manage to turn a phrase very neatly and descriptively. Will you tell me why you shouldn't make as much effort to express yourself [illegible] some girl you wish to w[illegible]

An Inflated Ego

No, don't tell me. I'll tell you. It's because you have an inflated ego, an exaggerated idea of your own importance. Now, if you're as bad as I hope you aren't, you will fling down this article in disgust and a crumple of paper. If you go on it must be with the clear understanding that I'm going to scold you and all the young fellows like you and to ride atilt at all for which you stand.

Maybe you aren't the sort to change one iota from the qualities which you loudly proclaim as being characteristic of you. But a bottle of glycerine would soften your hands so they wouldn't rasp against your sweetheart's cheek when you touch it. A visit to a department store or haberdasher, conducted modestly and with a request to the clerk to aid you in choosing your ties, would secure you neat and becoming neckwear. A bit of instruction and the awkwardness which makes you afraid to dance would wear off. Then you could take your part in a healthy joy-promoting exercise.

As for making up poetry and quoting it 'tis sheer bravado which shuts you off from doing it. No one as "lowbrow," as uncultured as you pretend to be, would know that Francois Villon ever existed. And you've evidently read and enjoyed Shakespeare and Byron.

My dear young [illegible] you're living a lie. You earn good money. And you think you're a great success—so about that you're [illegible] But about everything else you lose. You see you're proud and opinionated and sensitive too. And you don't want to do things at which you don't excel. So you elaborately pooh pooh the things you think you might belittle yourself by doing badly.

Don't deny it! I know. I'm a dreadful duffer at golf and I elaborately "don't like" the fine old Scotch game. See I smile as I confess. Now why don't you smile and confess that all you have against the niceties and charms and daintiness of love and courtship is that you feel awkward about 'em? The honest confession will be good for your soul.

Not the Real Thing

Stop swanking and puffing out your cheeks and talking about what you have to offer a girl. What good is it if it isn't what she wants?

All women need tenderness and consideration and understanding. Without them what calls itself love isn't worth much.

The man who whines about the way girls have treated him because he can't make love—has probably never felt love. To be in love—honestly and deeply in love—four times in three years is beyond all possibility of happening. It doesn't occur.

Four times in three years you've seen girls you thought would make you a good wife. None of them have so touched your heart that you took any interest in whether or not you would make her a good husband.

When a man loves he tries to learn love's niceties for the sake of the dainty woman he wants to win. And when a man who has deeply hidden in his soul the fine qualities my bitter friend displays won't stir under the crust of his own selfishness to make the pleasant traits active—it's because he is a selfish curmudgeon or a sensitive goose.

Now, boys, how 'bout it?

Household Suggestions

It is a good plan to cut the stems of flowers with a sharp knife rather than with scissors. Scissors compress the stems of the flower and close the tiny pores, so that no water can reach the top of the stem.

• • •

Faded washing dresses are, as a rule, the result of careless laundering. Do not use ammonia or any cleaning preparation in the water. Never wash colored goods in very hot water. Wash the dress out carefully in tepid water, using a pure soap, and rinse thoroughly in cold water. Hang it out to dry in a shady place.

CHAPTER XIX.

THE sun had slipped away for duty elsewhere and the light almost gone out of the sky before Bob's foursome, eighteen holes to the good, marched into the bar. After a ding-dong tussle the match had been halved on the home green,—Bob and Eric against Julian and Gilbert, an epoch-making match in which every man had pulled his best game out of the bag.

"On me," said Julian, going to the counter from which a hideous return to the worst days of hypocrisy and parish-pumpism had not yet removed the drink that cheers. Cocktails resulted while the card was studied and the battle gone over with laughter and mutual satisfaction. The long, low-ceilinged room was alive with men and voices. Those who had come in earlier and changed were playing cards. Others were on their way to the locker rooms and the showers. Sun and air and the week-end,—a mighty good combination. It had the effect of making men hang over a poker game with their arms round their neighbors' necks and harmonize the good old songs like boys. You could have cut the noise with a knife.

A note from Frankie was put into Gilbert Carlton's hands as he emerged in his birthday suit from a shower. It was brief and to the point and asked him to give her five minutes before dinner without fail. The last words "The devil has a scheme," puzzled him but sent him quickly to the case in which his evening clothes had been sent over. While Bob, Eric and Julian and all the other men near by sent lingage flying about the locker room and lingered over dressing, Gilbert pushed doggedly ahead, wondering what was in the air, but satisfied that not all the devils extant could stand between himself and Elsa.

Frankie's white hair and tall charming figure instantly caught his eye when he arrived in the crowded foyer where all the women of Quaker Hill seemed to be assembled. The sound of their continual buzz was like that of water falling over a weir. Dressed in black, the most becoming and the wisest of all shades, she was surrounded by Olive Rumsey, Nina Hopper, Doris Clayton, Mary Miller, Margaret, Daisy and Elsa. Mrs. Hicks, in what she had called her "dream," but which was more like a nightmare of a seed merchant, was holding forth to Susan Kester a little apart. She struck a jazzlike note in a melody of color.

Frankie, who had been watching the stairway that led up from the locker rooms, immediately disentangled herself from her group, led Gilbert into a little room behind the office and shut the door carefully. She wore the air of a brigade major of artillery, cool, alert and capable.

"Never mind how," she said, "but through a series of deductions I have come to the conclusion that our persistent trouble-maker, Anna Hicks, is going to play her last and strongest card tonight. By that I mean, of course, that she intends, if not prevented, to give Bob absolute proof that Margaret was at Baltimore with Julian—and you can see for yourself what that will do."

"Good God!" said Gilbert. "But why on earth should she do such a diabolical thing?"

"She has no children, my friend, and in her few honest moments realizes that she is blessed by nature neither with good looks nor a lovable character, and so she goes through life with the determination of paying nature out by doing all the harm she can to luckier people. I may be wrong, but that's how I sum up the psychology of the mischief-maker."

What Proof Has She Got?

"What proof has she got?" asked the practical Gilbert.

"Well, I happen to know that she has bribed a clerk in her husband's office to sneak into her hands evidence of the fact that Mary Miller went to Margaret's rescue. Think, my dear Gilbert, only just think what will happen to Bob if this thing is shown to him."

Gilbert screwed up his eyes, as men did when they heard a scream of pain out in the darkness of No Man's Land.

"But if we keep it away from him tonight," he said, "there is tomorrow."

"That's true, but by tomorrow I shall have worked out a plan to put the fear of God into that woman's substitute for a heart. We are now up against tonight, so we must all combine never to let Mrs. Hicks alone. Fasten on her yourself—let that be your particular business. Elsa will understand because she and Mary Miller and the rest of us have had a conclave. And now out quick before Bob comes up—and hang on to that creature like a bulldog to a bone."

He was only just in time. Following Julian and Eric, Bob halted on the top of the stairs to look for Margaret. Gilbert deployed to the left and planted himself in front of Mrs. Hicks at the moment that she was oozing her way through the crowd to speak to her newest victim. If you have ever seen the expression of an African kroo-boy when he is about to steal a bottle of whiskey out of your kit, you will know how Peroxide Anna looked as Gilbert caught her.

"Hullo, Mrs. Hicks," he cried out, with the most perfect simulation of cordial bonhomie. "How are you? And gee-whizz, what a corking frock!"

Two sour eyes ran slowly from the top of his head to the tip of his pumps and all the way back again. And finally this: "How clever some of us imagine ourselves to be, don't we?"

Whereupon Gilbert settled down to face the most undelectable incident of his career and laid himself in sacrifice upon the altar of friendship.

Then began an evening that few members of that apparently high-spirited party will ever forget. Of them all only Julian, Wilbur Hicks and Bob were unaware of the fact that they were sitting at a table under which there was an unexploded bomb. Poor Margaret, whose nerves had already been torn to tatters, had been warned by Frankie. How gladly she would have died where she sat to shock Mrs. Hicks into mercy. Daisy had also been put on her guard and enrolled for service. And all through that dreadful dinner she exhausted the list of possible things that Bob might do to Julian if the truth were told. Mary Miller and Elsa Mahan played up with desperate and glittering cheerfulness, hot and cold by turns, because both had felt the nails of Mrs. Hicks' cruel hand upon their flesh. Eric, who had received brief but implicit instructons from Gilbert, and Frankie Mundy, who was filled with the intensest sympathy for Margaret, watched over the blissfully unconscious Bob.

She Began to Flatter Herself

As for Mrs. Hicks, her unaccustomed popularity puzzled but did not give her the clew to the almost universal determination to head her off. Under the influence of several cocktails she presently began to flatter herself that her new creation had made a stir and that her wit was beginning to be appreciated. She basked in the unremitting attentions of Gilbert Carlton. How could any one possibly have discovered her possession of the incriminating paper? She didn't dream that, by one of those amazing coincidences which happen every day, Frankie's maid was being "sought" by Wilbur Hicks' frail clerk and who, in order to demonstrate his business astuteness, had boasted to the girl of his little deal with his employer's wife. The story had been carried immediately to Frankie and thus had been created one weapon for the protection of Bob and another, which Frankie was even then sharpening for use, with which to cut Mrs. Hicks' head off.

All went well while the dinner progressed and Mrs. Hicks was hedged in between Gilbert and Eric. But when the meal was finished and every one filed into the ballroom or out on the veranda, then the difficulty of the situation began, and the appalling part of it was that Bob showed a distinct desire to be polite and dance with Mrs. Hicks, because she was the wife of one of the men with whom he played bridge on the train.

For an hour Mrs. Hicks was kept on the floor without once being allowed to sit out and Gilbert and the rest watched the clock with growing confidence. But then Bob went off to telephone to a man at Greenwich who was coming over in the morning for a round of golf, and Mrs. Hicks slipped away to powder her nose. Mounting guard outside the door of the lady's room, Nina Hopper was found by a girl who had been at school with her and had just returned from Red Cross work in France. And during the moment that her back was turned Mrs. Hicks came out, caught sight of Bob at the very instant that he was leaving the telephone booth, pounced on him like a boa constrictor and asked for a few words in the moonlight on the deserted front steps of the clubhouse. Thus by a cynical trick of Fate, all the well-intentioned work of Bob's protectors went for nothing.

Gilbert went one pace nearer. "Answer that question, or as God's my judge I'll carry you into the middle of the ballroom and make you answer it there, before your husband!"

Becoming impatient, Nina looked into the lady's dressing room, saw that Mrs. Hicks had escaped and flew off to Frankie in a panic. Bob also was missing, and without a second's hesitation Frankie marshalled her forces together and led them into the foyer for the search.

Gilbert made a dash at the boy who was in charge of the door. "Did you see where Mr. Meredith went when he'd finished telephoning?"

The answer fell with a thud on the hearts of all the listeners.

"Yes, sir. Out in front with Mrs. Hicks."

Headed by the conscience-stricken Nina, out they all went, and there, a few feet from the great round flower bed in the centre of the drive, stood the dumpy figure in the comic frock, the moonlight on her all too golden head, and a crumple of paper lying at her feet. Upon this Eric pounced as Nina and Elsa Mahan seized Mrs. Hicks by the arms. There was no sign of Bob.

The Look of Triumph Faded

The look of triumph faded from the woman's face. "What's all this?" she blurted out.

"Take her along to the tennis courts," said Frankie. "No one can hear or see us there. Eric, find Bob, quick. Don't come back without him."

The boy charged back to the house.

"Let me go, or I'll scream the sky down," cried Mrs. Hicks.

But the two girls had her in a man's grip and ran her, struggling and gurgling, to the first of the tennis courts, where they forced her to a standstill behind a screen of bushes.

What Happened When Man and Woman Broke Laws of the Social Code

Frankie, Margaret, Daisy and Mary Miller, with Gilbert on their heels, followed instantly and surrounded the woman, whose unpleasant face was white with rage and fear. It was an extraordinary scene in that highly civilized place. Every one of those people had become primeval under the stress of emotion, and for all their modern clothes, dug back to an age when skins were the only wear and passions had no check.

"Did you show this paper to Bob Meredith?" demanded Frankie.

"What's that got to do with you?"

"Did you? Did you?" The chorus was an angry one, and threatening.

"For God's sake, tell us," cried Margaret, with her hands stretched out.

Nina burst into a scoffing laugh and yanked the arm she held.

Gilbert went one pace nearer.

"Answer that question or as God's my judge I'll carry you into the middle of the ballroom and make you answer it there, before your husband."

There was a moment's silence, broken only by the sound of many breathings and the sleepy rustling of leaves.

"Very well, then, I did. And I had the right. I wasn't going to see that man made a fool of by a guilty woman and her pack of friends. What about it? It's a free country."

Gilbert caught Margaret as her knees gave way and her little cry rose up to the pitying angels.

"But not so free as to allow you to continue to poison the air of this place," said Frankie. "You have delivered yourself at last into our hands. Those papers and the story of how you got them shall be given to Wilbur Hicks and if you are not clear of Quaker Hill by Monday you shall be placed under boycott and treated like a pariah dog. Let her go, my friends, and may she find it in her soul to be sorry for this most dastardly of all her tricks."

The two girls drew back, the circle was opened up and without another word that past mistress in the gruesome art of destroying the happiness of a community walked unevenly away.

It was Daisy who went to Margaret and kissed her and held her tight. She, too, felt as though she had been wrecked in mid-ocean and was hanging to a spar. In Margaret's mind there was only the sight of a quiet pool beneath the arms of trees.

And then Eric came up and every one hung upon his words.

"Bob's nowhere to be found," he said quietly. "No one's seen him at all. But I've brought Julian with me. I thought he ought to be here and be told what's happened."

And Julian, the handsome Julian, who had honestly done his best to unspoil himself and play the game, but whose one false step had imprinted an indelible mark upon the lives of all the people who faced him, passed, startled, into that strange emotional group, out there under that placid impersonal moon.

"What's the matter?" he asked, abruptly, looking from Frankie to Margaret, whose face was hidden in the shoulder of his wife.

Frankie put her hand on his arm. "Go and find Bob," she said. "You are the man to do this."

"Bob? Why? What's happened?"

Frankie pointed to the two women who were trying to comfort each other. "Need you ask?" she said.

He had seen Mrs. Hicks going to the place where the cars were parked. He had seen the look in Eric's eyes as the boy beckoned him off the floor of the ballroom. He now saw Daisy holding Margaret against her heart. There was in very truth no need for him to ask—Bob, the man who loved and believed in him, had been told.

"Yes, I am the man to do this. I will go and find Bob," he said, and with a humbleness that was strangely moving and pathetic, he bent down and kissed his wife's hand.

CHAPTER XX.

JULIAN OSBORN and Bob Meredith had stood in solemn inarticulation and eyed each other, in the usual manner of boys, when one was six and the other six and a half. Their parents, then unacquainted, had taken adjoining bungalows on the dunes at Easthampton,— simple and not unpicturesque wooden buildings perched up on a ridge of yellow sand and green scrub within a hundred yards of the eternal sea, sun-bathed, spray-smitten, and frequently fog immersed.

Setting out on a tour of discovery the morning after their arrival, expecting to find treasure and old spars, bones of pirates and footprints of man Friday, they had come suddenly face to face on the narrow board walk which ran unevenly and insecurely between the two cottages, halted and gazed. The handsome Julian, with his curly hair and long-lashed eyes, his white shirt open at the neck and khaki shorts well above his bare knees, carried a large water pistol thrust into his belt, together with a wooden axe and a whistle attached to a cord. A new and enviable air gun was slung across his shoulder with which to defend himself to the death against the innumerable enemies who certainly lurked near by and to provide the family larder with bison, buffalo, deer and probably an occasional elephant. He was a fine, well-put-together, fearless lad, unconsciously graceful and with an air of leadership that made an instant impression. The more sturdy Bob, irregular of feature, untidy of appearance and with a thick mat of brown hair that did just exactly as it liked despite his brush and comb, was empty-handed, although his pockets were already stuffed with shells, pieces of cork and round stones which had been smoothed and polished by the ins and outs of countless tides.

In his kind and honest eyes, as he examined this obviously favored specimen of a recognized species, the first note of admiration came which the sight of Julian had ever afterwards called up, and in his young heart he knew instantly that there stood one whom he would follow without question, trust to the ultimate edge of faith, and look up to as Captain during every adventure and hair-raising expedition which life had to offer in the immediate future, out there by the sea.

And that was the beginning of a friendship in which Julian was David and Bob Jonathan. The two boys were sent to the same school, afterwards going together from Lawrenceville to Princeton. Julian's early tendency to patronize the good-natured Bob and take advantage of the hero-worship which broke into bloom when they had come face to face that first sunny morning was continued through boyhood and youth. Bob's brain worked slowly and lacked the audacity and brilliance of Julian's. He took orders from his friend and carried them out with all the characteristic accuracy and attention to detail that made him an invaluable lieutenant at school and college. His soundness, honesty and the sort of loyalty that makes men fight and die won and held Julian's respect and affection, although Bob's inherent dislike of deceit and incapability of deviating the fraction of an inch from the truth were sometimes irritating to one who was a little careless in his methods in the achievement of his purpose.

Worked and Played Together

They worked and played together and were inseparable until the time arrived when Julian found that there were other amusements than those of sport, other triumphs to obtain than those of football and tennis. His dark eyes and straight nose and curly hair, his ever-ready laugh, his trick of looking at a girl as though she were the most desirable creature under the sky, his knack of being able to say those primeval things the personal note of which outrages a woman's sense of propriety but has a most soothing effect upon her vanity, opened up possibilities of which he was quick to take advantage. During his last year at Princeton he made frequent dashes into life, but surreptitiously and without once giving away any of the details of the history that he was making to the man from whom he had never before withheld a single thought or action. He was keenly anxious not to do anything that should damage the respect in which he was held by the simple, forthright Bob,—friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

When finally these two left college for the University of the World, the one to enter his father's business and the other to join the banking firm of an uncle, they shared rooms in a bachelor apartment house in West Forty-fourth Street and spent their holidays together in Europe or on the cat-boat mutually owned on the waters of their own country. Marriage, in the same year, failed by a miracle to separate them.

PART II.

IX.—Continued

CAPTAIN BARRISDALE, who had come up in her train, contrived to dodge in and out of the crowd until Kitty had safely departed.

"Many thanks," she said, bowing.

"I wish your husband wasn't so healthy," he said, looking at her closely.

"And why?" she said innocently.

"Oh, you understand very well what I mean, he said abruptly.

"It sounds like an ultra-modern proposal," she said, laughing.

"I say, you can guy me all you want, but look here; I'm not the first one along."

"Look out," she said, raising her finger, amusement still in her eyes. "I thought I gave you a lesson once, and you were to behave."

"What's wrong in saying you're the only woman ever got me—really got me—so that I'd take a second shot at matrimony—"

"You can say anything, if you know how to say it—but you don't."

"Perhaps not; but, all the same"—he glanced about and lowered his voice—"it isn't going to make you feel any worse to know that—if anything ever happened, well—one way or the other, I stand back of what I said."

"And you expect me to believe you?"

"I know you believe me," he said, looking at her fixedly. At times, the captain had no difficulty in making himself understood.

She left him with a deeper feeling than amusement. A year before, she would have been indignant at the rudeness of this declaration. It was significant of her social progress that now it rather pleased her. Captain Barrisdale, at forty-five, rich into eight figures, was considered a great catch.

"Well, there is one would marry me instantly," she thought to herself, as she moved somberly away. It gave her a feeling of independence. Not that she had the slightest serious contemplation of such an eventuality, but that, in the security of the present, it was necessary for her to explore the future and mark it with certain dependable landmarks—one or two—the more the better. She made a tour of the floor, seeking her husband, and perceived him on the balcony, talking to Irma. She was not altogether pleased with this. She had given a measure of her confidence to Irma, but it was quite another thing for Andrew to do so. She did not altogether trust Irma. She caught the expression in his face, and it was to her like the skeleton at the feast.

"How adamant—how perfectly relentless he can be!" she thought. "Nothing can move him. He will never give up an idea. He isn't human."

What she could not understand was that he could remain unmoved at the spectacle of her success.

"No; he ought to be happy to have such a wife—a wife that every one wants," she said, with a sudden lump in her throat. "And he won't say a word to me—to make me proud—just because—because I have shown that I have spirit, too."

Midnight rang. Dawson came up. It was time for the minuet.

X.

MONTE BRACKEN could do more things better than any man he had ever met, yet in every endeavor he remained of the second rank. All games and sports came to him easily. He played the piano with a genuine talent and comprehended music passionately and profoundly. He had an instinct for beautiful things wherever met. His taste was sure, and distinguished between the meretricious and the stark simplicity of great art. He had written occasional essays, distinguished for charm, humor and an Old World penetration acquired from a short diplomatic experience in Paris and Vienna. He lacked but one thing—the spur of necessity. Until thirty, he had cherished the hope that he would make his name known in diplomacy or in letters. But as the years glided on in their easy course, a feeling of disillusionment replaced the glow of early dreams. He became a brilliant flaneur, a sort of demi-hero, and he consoled himself as all such dramatic temperaments do. Love to him was a periodic and necessary intoxication. When he was in love, all the really brilliant qualities of his mind awoke, and periodically, in that narcotic state of dreams, he believed that he was on the verge of doing something worthy of what he knew he possessed. The need of love made him believe in love. He had had his share of what the French call "bonnes fortunes." Yet if he had been loved often, he had loved genuinely if without discipline. He had that rare quality of being lovable—a quality which one has or has not, which cannot be imitated and is never acquired. He attracted women by a certain element of weakness they divined in his nature, that appealed to them, and called forth their treasures of generosity and sacrifice. Women loved him instinctively, but seldom deeply, and left him with kindness but small regret. On his side, the shock was acute; he experienced a profound depression for each experience irreparably spent of the fast diminishing fabric of his youth. So keen was this revulsion that he had come to dread the thought of any new entanglement, knowing too well the exquisite finality of pain. When, therefore, quite unprepared, he had come face to face with Amy Forrester and experienced that quick thrill of all his senses, his first instinct was to retreat.

"If I see her—if I talk to her—I know what will happen," he said to himself. "Better to aovid danger."

But if he avoided her, his eyes could not refrain from seeking her charming silhouette in the play of moving colors. He tried the distraction of conversations; re fenced with Irma, who usually amused him, and found suddenly that what he was saying had no meaning to him. From time to time his glance met Amy's. Her eyes, conscious of his scrutiny, sent him in turn their playful questioning.

"Why don't you tell me that I am charming, that I please you? What is the harm in that?"

And then she began to dance in the stately measures of the minuet. All at once he left the Challoners and went to the shadow of a doorway, standing alone, sheltering himself behind an orange tree, his eyes fixed on the little figure in royal blue that was like the joy of the deep, clear sky through a parting storm.

Lackeys Had Cleared the Floor

In the long ballroom the lackeys had cleared the floor. The guests, against the walls on little footstools or camped on rugs, framed the dancers with the glowing tangle of many colors. Overhead, a black-blue canopy, shot with a thousand little holes, let through in starry radiance jewel-rays of light from the masked chandeliers above. The windows and the doors, framed in foliage, gave faint vistas of lake and melting hills lost in the sylvan night. Illuminated trees in the four corners of the cleared floor sent golden shafts over the polished surface. The air, rescued from the electric whiteness of the modern night, floated in harmonious and gentle flood. From the orchestra hidden in the balcony came the awakened surge of violins. The dancers courtesied, took places and lifted their graceful arms. In the costumed throng, the murmur of voices was hushed as each guest, under the spell of rhythmic beauty, yielded to the fairyland of unreality.

At the first measure, Tody Dawson, troubled by this sudden concentration of many eyes, had a moment of stage fright. He blundered, missed his step, and, unable to recover himself, threw the figure into disorder.

Another moment, and the confusion would have been inextricable. Amy saw it and calmly, without embarrassment, clapped her hands. The orchestra came to a discordant pause.

"My fault," she said in a clear, laughing tone. "I ask every one's pardon—but such an audience is very, very terrifying! Every one ready? Begin again!"

She felt mistress of the situation, and the little amical nod she sent Dawson restored his confidence at once. This time the measure moved without a break, amid a buzzing appreciation of her tact and poise.

The moment was critical in her life. It needs only the intoxication of one waltz to change the destiny of a young girl—how much more so such a triumph before a hundred rivals! As she danced, moving in swaying grace and poised with dainty gesture, hearing the murmured admiration which centred on her own loveliness, all the profound corruption in which she had moved—corruption of Morley, daily and insidious; corruption of the young fellows in her train who had infected her imagination with the craving for excitement; corruption of shops and the argus-eyed crowd; corruption of pleasant places and brilliant audiences—all the multiple corruption of New York which had been fastening about her, as a vine makes its capture, all this corruption reached its apotheosis in the ecstacy of this theatrical moment. This was her woman's career, her right to youth! If Andrew did not understand this, if Andrew did not realize what he had carried off like another Paris—then Andrew was blind indeed!

She danced, her head thrown back and a little to one side, smiling with half-closed eyes—at what? At the multiple public perhaps, every one of whom she wished to draw to her, to dazzle, to coax, and to entice. Her own sex was there, her dearest rivals. For this one night she could face them and defy them to pick a flaw. Glowing, serene, and awakened, her glance ran through the brilliant audience seeking to visualize it. All at once, from beneath her eyelashes she found the eyes of Monte Bracken set on her. From that moment she danced to him. The complex public was comprehensible now in the smile on his lips and the glance which never left her.

The minuet over, she was caught in the crush of those who stormed about her with exclamatory compliments. She knew that he would not approach her in this public struggle. She waited the moment when he would seek her, a little restless at the insistent admirers who clung to her. The general dancing had begun. Escaping the crowd, she passed into the dining room with its red-and-gold tent. He was not there or in the outer hall.

She came restlessly through the corridors. Why did he avoid hir? Why should he alone deprive her of the one compliment she longed to hear?

"Mr. Bracken!" He had seen her coming and started to turn away. "Do you know that you are the only one who hasn't said something nice to me?" she said impatiently. "Are you running away from me?"

He bowed.

"Perhaps."

"Then you didn't like my dancing?"

"My dear Mrs. Forrester," he said in a low voice, "you must understand what I mean when I say that I was running away."

This was the tribute she needed to complete her happiness. She felt a sudden wave of joy. He was afraid—a little afraid of her.

"Please don't run away," she said, smiling happily, "and do say more nice things to me. You're the one person who really knows."

She stood before him on tiptoe, looking up at him with the eyes of a child who looks out in surprise on the world, and her glance asked so plainly, "Am I pretty; do I please you?" that his caution was given to the winds of impulse.

"You are the only one that is real here," he said suddenly. "All the rest of us are actors, powdered and painted actors, without the glamour of the footlights. You are the real thing. You are France, the beautiful days, the indolence that will never come again. How do you do it. How does it come so naturally to you—the grace, the lightness, the exquisiteness, every movement, every motion? Even now as you are listening, 'nymph of the downcast eye and sidelong glance,' pleased at what I am saying to you, you are so much more charming than what I have said, that I feel as though I had told you nothing. You are so transformed that I don't know you—or rather, this is so truly you, what you were meant to be, that I can't imagine you any other way."

She Colored and Breathed Deeply

She colored, and drew a long, delighted breath.

"Oh, I feel like running away myself!"

"Don't!" he said hurriedly, and his hand half rose to retain her. "Let's play. It's part of the masque. We have our parts, too. It's carnival time! Tomorrow is near enough!"

"I don't know who I really am," she said, with answering excitement. "I feel—well, I feel so irresponsible, as though what I did or said was some one else. Do you understand?"

"You saw me watching you?" he said, looking at her.

She nodded.

"Of course I did. You know, I couldn't find you at first. I looked for you in the gallery, and then all at once I saw you behind a tree. I wanted you to like me." She stopped. He had that dangerous quality of making women seek him, that led them unconsciously to venture further. She knew that she was on dangerous ground. Yet she could not resist the intoxication of enjoying what she had at last won in him. Besides, it was all a game, a part of the masque, as he himself had said.

"You have arrived," he said quietly. "That sounds impertinent, but it isn't meant so."

"You remember what you prophesied?"

"But I was mistaken in one thing."

"What?"

"You have come to be what I foretold, though a hundred times more bewitching and dazzling than I expected, but—you have kept your heart of a child."

"Tonight I've been saying just the contrary," she said abruptly, sobered.

"No, no! It is there," he said softly. "It is still unspoiled—and that's what's dangerous—for others."

"You are awfully nice," she said, smiling at him. "Please always say things to make me happy."

She said this quite unconcernedly, as though she had received the most trivial compliment; nor was he able to divine whether this was the art of the woman restoring the barrier between them or the unconscious soul of a child that is ignorant of the desires it sows.

Market Weakens a Little During Forenoon; Curb Active on an Early Decline

The Boston market had a weak start and the early trend was slightly accentuated during the first hour. Early business here was of moderate volume and as a rule fluctuations were narrow. Most of the trading was in the stocks which have been locally prominent of late. Lows for the year were established by Warren Brothers and Swift International. Warren Brothers declined a point before the forenoon was half over, while Wolverine and U. S. Smelting advanced as much. Coppers showed little change of consequence. Rails were weak and packing shares irregular.

Fractional gains were made by Swift & Co., Libby, Bigheart and Eastern Manufacturing, while small losses were sustained by Boston & Maine, New Haven, International Products, Seneca, Elder, West End and East Butte.

CURB WEAK AND ACTIVE.

The Curb was weak at the start and also had an active opening. The early leader was Eureka, a stock which led the list for a turnover the day before. Others to show prominence were Arizona Silver, Arizona Tip Top and Boston & Montana. Eureka sold lower, as did the two issues last named. Among those to advance at once were Helca Divide, Merrimac Development and Mutual.

At the end of an hour Arizona Silver was up 2 cents at 22 cents, Allied Mining 2 cents at 29 cents, and Mutual 4 cents at 39 cents, while Tip Top was off 1 cents at 10 cents, Boston & Montana 1 cent at 47 cents, Eureka 12 cents at 43 cents, Merrimac 1 cent at 25 cents, Bagdad 1 cent at 23 cents and Crystal 1 cent at 59 cents.

Arkwright Mills stockholders will pass at a special meeting upon the recommendation by directors that the corporation's stock be increased from $450,000 to $1,000,000 by converting accumulated profits into permanent capital and paying a stock dividend.

The Island Oil & Transport Co. has considerable acreage in the new Zacamixtle field, which has become one of the chief centres of interest among oil operators in Mexico since the completion of Mexican Petroleum's 75,000-barrel well there.

The results obtained by Calumet & Hecla are said to show that it can earn by its reclamation plant nearly $9 a share from that source alone even with copper at 15 cents a pound.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Oct. 28.—The cotton market opened weaker at a decline of 20 to 41 points on the hitch in negotiations to end the strike of the British coal miners, cables continued poor and advices regarding the Texas situation and Southern weather were unsatisfactory. The list continued to drop after the start and at the end of twenty minutes was about 65 points under last night's close. Opening prices were: December, 20.92; January, 20.30; March, 20.12; May, 20.00; July, 19.90; September, 19.75.

WALL STREET LOANS GREATLY REDUCED

The 10 per cent. rate for call money is the result of the demand for accommodations in agricultural regions. The present is the "peak" of crop moving and interior banks have been withdrawing their balances in New York. This has reduced the amount available for stock market purposes.

The brokers' loans have been greatly reduced in the aggregate and are believed by authorities to total about $800,000,000, whereas at one time they approximated $2,000,000,000.

OILS LEAD AN EARLY DROP

Steels, Rails, Motors, Sugars and Equipments Figure in the Recessional

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were weak in New York at noon, the morning price improvement being slight. Most issues were at their lowest when it was over. In the second hour Hide & Leather preferred sold at a new low for 1920. Trading was more active than for several days, first-hour transactions totaling nearly 200,000 shares. Call money again opened at 9 per cent.

Foreign exchange rates were steady, opening quotations being demand sterling $3.46⅛, off ⅛ cent; francs $.0632, up $.0001; lire $.0372, off $.0001; marks $.0135, off $.0002.

PRICES LOWER AT OPENING.

The recessional that marked the opening was attributed in the main to the high money rate. It has gone to 10 per cent. for several days, after beginning at 8 or 9, and funds for speculative purposes are now as scarce as at any time this year. Because of crop moving exigencies Western banks have been withdrawing balances from New York, and another factor has been the shifting of government funds. Today transactions of the latter kind will involve $16,000,000, bringing the week's total up to about $44,000,000. The whole list reflected the downward movement when the exchange began business, and initial losses ranged from fractions to five points. Oils suffered the most, Mexican Petroleum dropping two at the outset and Standard Oil of New Jersey first five and then ten. Steels also eased off. Rails were lower, with Reading the weakest. Equipments, motors, coppers, sugars and tobaccos figured in the setback.

BEARS ARE AGGRESSIVE.

Bears have resumed their aggressive tactics, and as most of the professional trading crowd can be classed with this contingent and the public is not buying stocks to any extent, the market has little support except at levels which are supposed to invite accumulating by important interests which have great resources as well as foresight. There was disappointment because London cablegrams announced that British labor and government were still unable to settle the coal strike. Nothing new developed overnight in the trade situation in this country. Steel stocks indicated smaller profits for manufacturers of that product. The Iron Age says new business is not increasing and that the downward tendency of steel and iron prices has been more pronounced. U. S. Food Products and Inspiration Copper sold at new 1920 lows in the first hour. At the end of that period prices averaged below the opening level.

New Haven Note Issue

The Interstate Commerce Commission has authorized the New York, New Haven & Hartford road to issue $2,000,000 7 per cent. promissory notes, the proceeds to reimburse the treasury for money expended to obtain equipment. The road also was granted authority to issue and pledge $3,500,000 equipment trust notes, of which $2,800,000 are to bear interest at 7 per cent. and the remainder at 6 per cent.

Panama Canal Traffic

During the month of September Panama Canal traffic broke the commercial record, the aggregate net tonnage of merchant ships passing through the waterway being 1,008,785 tons, against the previous record of 951,345 made in the preceding month.

LOWER PRICES CAUSE CONTRACT BREAKING

Under the caption "Welching on Contracts," the News Bureau says the sharp decline in commodity prices has caused very discreditable attempts to ignore agreements entered into in good faith and binding on both parties. It says:

"We hear of a very large automobile manufacturer who has cancelled millions of dollars' worth of contracts under penalty—if the agreement is not torn up—of being entirely cut out of all future business. Some of the manufacturers so notified have had the courage to hold the automobile maker to the full letter of his obligation. Others, fearing the loss of future business, have felt constrained to bow the knee and take the loss which in all decency is not theirs to assume."

U. S. Steel Stockholders

Treasury Silver Buying

The latest silver purchase by the Treasury Department is 132,000 ounces for the Philadelphia mint, bringing total buying on this movement up to 16,029,107 ounces.

Are Railroad Stocks Selling Too High?

Ever since the increased freight rates went into effect, the rails listed on the New York Stock Exchange have been advancing, and many people are wondering how much further they will go.

This is an interesting question, and its answer is governed by the ability of the roads as a whole to operate profitably under existing conditions. And the outlook in this connection is summed up in an article appearing in our

Adams States Many Are Not Able to Reduce Prices Further at Present

(The statement of the Commission on the Necessaries of Life, which was issued by Charles H. Adams, speaking for the Commission, was so extraordinary in certain elements, that the Boston American sent especially to him to get a clear explanation of his meaning. Mr. Adams gives herewith a supplementary statement in which he explains his previous statement.—Editor of the Boston American.)

"I intended to state what I felt to be the disappointment of the people who, upon reading the advertisements of the reductions in prices of odd-sized, odd lots and other special articles, expected these would be followed by a general reduction of the prices of standard lines of clothing and shoes. For example, we saw the price of wheat come down and naturally expected that the price of bread would decline. We had assumed that everything had gone down, but upon looking into it found it hadn't.

"The statement certainly was not intended to reflect upon the integrity of the Boston or other merchants or upon the character of their advertising. Their advertising spoke for itself and certainly was straightforward. Whether any reductions could have been made or could now be made in the prices of standard articles of clothing and shoes is, to say the least, very doubtful.

"The shoe men claim that, although there has been a reduction in the price of leather, there has been an increase in the cost of labor and they state they have been unable to buy retail shoes at any reduced price.

"Certain standards of blue serge, which have been used for ten years in statistics, have not decreased and some have increased. We have verified this information from the merchants themselves. I don't think there has been any increase in profits. The retailer has been unable to buy cheaper."

More Foreign Loans

More foreign loans are to be floated in this country, according to Wall street reports. The City of Amsterdam is said to be planning to sell an issue here, but the amount is not announced. There is talk of a $25,000,000 Swedish bond issue being offered and the City of Stockholm is seeking from $5,000,000 to $7,500,000 in the American money market.

Taking The In Out of Indigestion

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Are Nicely Balanced to Enable You to Eat What You Like Without Distress

Indigestion is about the most universal complaint of mankind. And when the stomach is sour, gassy, bloated-like and you get that peculiar bilious taste in the mouth due to indigestion or dyspepsia there is nothing more relieving than one or two Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Many people are afraid of nearly all the good old savory dishes, the fried eggs, sausage, steak and onions and so on, as they usually experience the peculiar acidity which often follows such food. But Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets were designed to supply the stomach with the alkaline effect to offset the acid condition. For this reason many physicians recommend these tablets and you can get them in any drug store at 60 cents a box.

LEONORE ULRIC LIKES HER ROLE

Star of "The Son Daughter" Under Heavy Strain During Tragic Portrayal

By FRED J. McISAAC.

Waiting on the dark stage to see Leonore Ulric, who was going through the terrific final scene of "The Son Daughter," was an odd experience, even for a dramatic reporter accustomed to looking at the wrong end of the scenery in many theatres.

When my eyes got accustomed to the shadow I could see a man standing by a huge Chinese gong on one side of the setting and another man with another huge gong on the other side. Further over was a piano with a pianist in a waiting attitude. Through the solid set came muffled voices pitched in tragic tones.

"Bing," went one huge gong.

"Bing, bing," went another.

Bang, came a loud report from behind me. A man was gravely blowing up paper bags and bursting them. Out front that report was most impressive.

STAR LIKE CHINESE DOLL.

The pianist stepped on a pedal which changed the tone of his instrument to a mandolin effect and began to play weird tinkling Chinese music. Miss Ulric's voice rose above the others. Then she began to scream. Finally came what sounded to us back stage like a prolonged and enthusiastic gargle. Then the curtain rolled down and applause burst out front. The play was over, and the tiny little tragedienne came darting out of the set towards her dressing room.

It was astonishing that a scene which is as moving and thrilling as anything Belasco ever staged should not affect one more when viewed wrong end to, but perhaps it would be astonishing if it did, in view of the circumstances.

Miss Ulric, viewed in the yellow lights of the dressing room, looked like an animated Chinese doll with her eyebrows heavily pointed upward and round red spots of rouge on each cheek contrasting with the snowy whiteness of the remainder of her countenance.

She was laughing merrily at something said to her by an austere looking Chinaman in a long robe when I was thrust in.

"I often wonder how you folks can turn your hearts inside out on the stage and throw your sorrow right off the instant the curtain descends," I said to her.

UNDER A HEAVY STRAIN.

"We don't all throw it right off. I want to tell you it is a strain to do emotional roles, for me at least, and this part takes more out of me than anything I ever did," said the little star. "Sit down, please. How do you like my room"?

The place looked very Chinese, as a matter of fact. Rows of open fans ran across the ceiling, partially hiding the corrugated iron roof of the star's dressing room. Beautiful robes of yellow and parti-colored satin covered the walls. The long dressing table had Chinese bric-a-brac all over it. The only things occidental were four photographs of David Belasco, all in more or less sacerdotal poses.

"I see you have a lot of pictures of Belasco."

"Pooh, that isn't many. I have any quantity of them at home. Every girl who ever worked in a Belasco production collects Belasco pictures. He is such a wonderful man. How do you like the Son Daughter?" Before you answer come and see it three or four times. It is like all masterpieces, it grows on you. It is going to be a grand opera, and how I wish I could sing in it."

IN LOVE WITH HER ROLE

"Then you like your part."

"It's a wonderful part. I simply live the little Chinese girl and I think about her when I am off the stage as well as on, despite your opinion that we forget our roles when the curtain comes down."

"That isn't my opinion. I wondered how you could forget them, particularly the tragic ones."

"I have been suffering from a cold for several days and I have been worrying for fear I couldn't give the people all I would like to of my role. So you see I think of it all the time."

"What do you plan to do next? Somethng exotic?"

"I always do seem to be playing queer parts. There was an Indian girl, and the French-Canadian girl and now a Chinese girl. I know what I am to do next, but it is a great secret. I must not tell. There are so many kinds of parts I like to play. I get so excited thinking of some of them. But Mr. Belasco knows what I should do, and I'll probably play what he suggests."

HER HAIR REDDISH BROWN.

It was really weird to sit opposite such a quaint looking little Oriental and hear her talk in faultless English. But Miss Ulric now removed the nets which had plastered down her hair and her untamed mane immediately spread out as it did in "Tiger Rose." This made her appearance even more fantastic.

"There is really some reddish brown in my hair, but I have these very brunette parts, so I have to plaster it with grease and make it dark," she remarked. "I suppose when I get a part which calls for lighter hair people will say I have dyed it, but you can see there is red in it, can't you?"

"Positively," I asserted. "What makes it stick out so?"

"Oh, nothing. It's the way it grows," said Miss Ulric.

DETROIT CRIMES UNAVENGED

Officials Find It Impossible to Secure Convictions In Feud Murders

Assassins in speeding automobiles cruise Detroit streets shooting down victims with steel ball bearings sprayed from sawed-off shotguns. Twenty-four murders so far this year, 100 in ten years, is the toll of this manifestation in one American city of the lawlessness of the Sicilian Mafia. This is the fourth of a series of articles depicting the situation.

IV.—The Fall of the House of Giannola.

Detroit, Oct. 28.—Sam Giannola was subjected to a wearisome delay before he could establish his alibi. It was May 14 when he was whisked away in an automobile to a banquet to celebrate his freedom. It is said that the banquet was prepared before the jury returned its "not guilty."

He had been arrested on February 23, but it was difficult to empanel a jury. "Would you be prejudiced because of the nationality of the defendant?" "Would you be afraid to return a verdict of guilty?" and "have you a fixed opinion?" were the stumbling blocks.

SHOOTINGS EVERY WEEK

Sam's alibi was that he was in the Chamber of Commerce at the time of the shooting. Even Joe Vitale, who had recovered sufficiently to be taken to court as a witness, swore on the stand that Giannola was not among those present when he and Renda and Evola were shot, though Renda on his death bed had said that Sam Giannola shot him.

The guns had not been altogether silent during the spring. Vincent Restevo was killed in a bakery at No. 2080 Russell avenue on March 1. Then Antonio Prostori was shot at No. 344 Rosedale court. This was in error. Antonio was not the man sought. He got in the line of fire. Tony Bellette, No. 842 Monroe avenue, fell on March 4. A month later to the day Michel Matissi and Joseph Baccellatto were shot.

This completed the killings for the first part of 1919 and then came the armistice signed in blood on May 23.

Whether the protocol was drafted between Sam Giannola and John Vitale while they were occupying murderers' cells in the county jail is not known. Both were men of affairs, worth in each case hundreds of thousands of dollars, and the inactivity and interruption to business must have been irksome.

There is no question but that an armistice was signed and that delegates were present from all over the country. Chieftains are known to have come from California, Washington, Pennsylvania and New York. The expenses were borne by Detroit Sicilians. One leader admitted his part, saying that the conference was costly but he considered it a good investment. His share of the expenses was $1,700.

PEACE ENVOY WAS ARMED.

John Vitale's farm is thought to have been the Versailles for this treaty of peace. Each delegate was a two-gun man, one pistol in plain sight and the other concealed. Matters were discussed calmly, however, and arrangements were made to pay indemnities to the families of the victims. At the conclusion the agreement was signed, each man after affixing his signature opening a vein and sealing the compact in blood.

Sam Giannola, his friends say, accepted this peace as final. The young men who always rode with him in his limousine were dismissed. Sam held that accounts were squared and that he could look the world in the eye. At the age of twenty-nine he was regarded as worth $150,000, and some said he might have been a millionaire if he had devoted more time to business and less to crime. He was quiet and soft-spoken and gave the impression of a successful young business man.

But the end was inevitable. The police knew it and so did he.

August had been marked by a resumption of murders. Filipino Angelera and Sam Miscuraca were killed on August 9. On August 16 Joseph Carolla of Ford City was shot down while riding his bicycle to work. He owned his own house and left a wife and seven children, one two weeks old. Tony Calabrio was slashed for interfering in a triangle to which he was neither base, perpendicular nor hypotenuse. It concerned a beautiful bride who at sixteen had already figured in two dramatic incidents.

September was quiet but on October 2 came the tragedy that has made the past year the bloodiest in feud history.

Sam Giannola was shot as he stepped out of the American State Bank at 2:35 in the afternoon. Twenty-eight bullets entered his body, nine under the left arm as he extended it to ward off the volley which instinct told him to expect when he saw several figures lurking across the street. He turned and re-entered the bank, falling dead before the cage of the cashier who a moment before had cashed his $200 check.

25 WITNESSES FOUND.

Giannola was unaccompanied and unarmed. He still believed in the truce.

Patrolman Loggins was chasing crap shooting kids up an alley. He thought he was right on the job at a bank holdup. A sanitary policeman saw three men run away. Ignatius Galanti, manager of the bank, and Joe Puglisi, clerk, were eye-witnesses. Jesse Jackson of Youngstown, O., saw a short man running up an alley and picked up three shells the short man ejected from his automatic pistol. In all twenty-five witnesses were found.

The bank was at Russell street and Monroe avenue. It was founded by Ferdinand Palma, a former policeman, who was riddled with buckshot by blackhanders one night.

John Vitale was in the county building with his attorney when the body of his foe was brought in. He made it evident that he had had no part in the tragedy, and when asked to comment only shrugged his shoulders.

Three sorrowful widows and twenty-one children—the survivors of the once all-powerful feudal family—left Detroit December 28, 1919, and went into seclusion. There was the widow of Sam, with her brood of four, Tony's relict and her five, the Giannola sister, widow of Pasquale Danni, and her seven, and five other orphans of clansmen previously slain and then were dependants of the Giannolas. Tony's widow had received a letter threatening the wiping out of the entire generation.

Business May Break Through Ice Unless Buying Starts

The following statement of business conditions and estimate of the future is by a noted Boston merchant:

There is neither hesitancy nor reluctancy as to buying. There appears to be no desire to buy. To be successful, buying must be entered into as enthusiastically as any other activity.

We are making no commitments for Spring.

We see no change since a month ago, excepting as the "ice is getting thinner" there is likelihood of breaking through unless a campaign is soon begun to arouse the consumer to the necessity of buying.

If liquidation has sufficiently run its course now is the time to inform the public, and unless the consumer buys, so that the wheels of business move actively, demand will stop; production will cease; employment will find itself without opportunity; stagnation in business will become a fact, and the object of those who advised people to stop buying a while ago will go beyond the point they desired, namely, to lower the cost of commodities, because in attaining the end it will have been done at the expense of the disruption of normal economic conditions.

Unless the change comes soon, failure awaits many, and as business is so co-related and inter-related and bears against its other parts, the disturbance will reach from retailer through to banks by way of manufacturer and dealer in raw materials.

What ought to be a busy retail season (and wholesale season as well) is now on and the consumer, or buying public, normally do much buying up to Christmas. With what has gone on during these past several months, if the season does not measure up to the average, you can readily see how weak the business structure is likely to be at the beginning of the next active retail season, which ought to start April 1st next.

It seems to me that the Federal Reserve System to which bankers, merchants and public now look for advice and support can do much to change the present inactive condition by spreading necessary information.

Unless I am mistaken the mental attitude of everybody would change within a short time, and while the period of readjustment would continue (and really should continue), it would be less drastic and, therefore, less harmful.

Filene May Be Obsessed by League, but Is Never Stupid

The accusation, if it is an accusation, that Mr. Edward A. Filene went to Germany for the purpose of getting Germany to join the League of Nations is, as Mr. Filene denounces it, a stupid charge. Any accusation which assumes stupidity on the part of Edward A. Filene is very stupid indeed. Mr. Filene's humanitarianism may lead him to obsession, like the one he entertains for the League of Nations, but nothing would ever lead him into stupid ways.

We have no doubt whatever that had Mr. Filene not become deeply involved and obsessed with a League of Nations such as we all wanted before President Wilson betrayed us at Paris, a League of Nations based upon the fourteen points for which we were fighting in the great war, he would now be as vigorously opposing the present League of Nations as any of us, for it is the very antithesis of the ideal conception we all had of the league. As it stands today it is an offensive and defensive alliance—the very thing which we wanted to destroy by a League of Nations.

When we have rejected the present League of Nations and commissioned a new President to negotiate a better understanding among the nations, one that will preserve our right and our power to set good examples and to aid if we choose the oppressed everywhere; one that is not an offensive and defensive alliance to safeguard the spoils of war, but one which will establish a court in which the oppressed people of the world can be heard before the public opinion of the world; one that is not a breeder of war, but a preserver of peace, then, such a league Mr. Filene will work for just as hard and with a far more easy conscience than he is working for this league which the intelligence and the rectitude of his mind must compel him to recognize as the very doubtful choice of very great evils.

The only offence there could be in going to Berlin to get the Germans to join the league is that it would, as Mr. Filene says, be stupid. But until Germany and Russia are admitted to the league it will be no league to preserve peace.

Truthful Advertising Best Policy for Advertisers

The New England Association of Advertising Clubs had a very interesting conference last week. It is the business of these gentlemen to know a great deal about the vital and the industrial and commercial statistics of the communities which they serve. Therefore, it is of interest to New England to know that all of them exhibited a great deal of real faith in the prosperity, during the immediate future, both of the whole country and of New England in particular.

One of the gentlemen called attention to a fact that is little known in New England, which is that, for our area, we have the greatest value in crops of any section in the country. The average man believes that New England is an agricultural community practically run down and abandoned.

Mr. Louis K. Liggett, head of the United Drug Company, which claims to be the largest chain of drug stores in the world, and the prosperity of each branch of which is obviously a thermometer for the prosperity of the community it serves, declared at this conference:

"This talk about the country going to the dogs is all nonsense. We are just lacking confidence—that is all we need." In response to a question as to whether his world-wide organization contemplated a cut in advertising, he said: "We have talked over the future program just this morning, and I told them to leave advertising alone. If I thought my business was slipping I would increase my advertising budget."

Liggett ought to know if anybody does.

Another interesting subject of discussion was devising a method of compelling absolute truthfulness in all advertising. The effect of advertising, of course, would greatly increase if the public had absolute confidence in the unqualified truthfulness of all of it. Most of it now, of course, is absolutely truthful.

The American for years has refused to accept any dishonest, untruthful, misleading or improper advertising.

More Truth Than Poetry

Lights and Shadows

By S. E. KISER

SOMEWHERE the birds are singing
And somewhere joys prevail;
Somewhere brave men are clinging
To hopes that cannot fail;
Somewhere there still is gladness
In every fragrant breeze,
But Yale is filled with sadness
By Harvard victories.

SOMEWHERE fond lovers lightly
Decline to cling to care;
The sun is shining brightly
On rich and poor, somewhere,
But there is no denying
That sorrow fills the soul
Of any man who's trying
To buy a ton of coal.

SOMEWHERE glad hearts are glowing
As only glad hearts may,
And somewhere streamlets, flowing,
Make music that is gay;
But things are looking rotten
In Dixie Land today;
The present price of cotton
Has driven hope away.

SOMEWHERE there's gladness—plenty!—
The sweet and blushing miss
Has made the boy of twenty
Ecstatic with a kiss,
But deeper, always deeper,
The sizzling irons burn
The former grog-shop-keeper,
For hootch will not return.

Lure of Paris Ruins Girls

BEAUTIFUL Olive Thomas, having swallowed the fatal poison, is said to have fallen to the floor, sobbing:

"This is what Paris has done to me!"

The Rev. Dr. Beekman of the American Church in Paris says that Olive Thomas, popular moving picture artist, is not the only American girl who might truthfully utter that despairing cry.

"There are now in Paris," he declared recently, "hundreds of Americans who are destitute, and yet they enjoyed prosperity in their own country. They have been ruined utterly by the accursed lure of the modern Babylon.

"They now spend their time in practically a continuous state of intoxication from wine and worse. Thousands who come here for only a short time stay long enough to lose their souls and return home broken in spirit and health and totally unfit to live a clean life.

"Washington should send another 'Undesirable Ark,' similar to the one in which Emma Goldman and the other Reds were deported, to clean up Paris of the hordes of good citizens now rushing to total perdition. The souls and the lives of unsophisticated American girls and young men are not safe in Paris."

Just what Olive Thomas may have seen in the early morning hours that led to her shocking death—some of the disreputable night life which has aroused even the French Senate to indignant demand for its suppression—is described in a thrilling expose and warning in next Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Francis Burke Roche escaped being a British peer by just one minute. He was born too late! And so his twin brother, Maurice, will inherit the title. But Maurice is in almost as strange a position, for in order to assert his unquestioned right of becoming a British lord he runs the risk of losing a great American fortune. An interesting feature of next Sunday's Magazine Section.

How have professional thieves managed to make way with jewels whose value runs into millions in the past few months? There is an epidemic of "Raffles" affairs, and society the country over is being stripped of its costly ornaments. Described next Sunday.

LET CHILD DEVELOP CREATIVE POWER

RECOGNIZE your child's personality. Develop it, do not suppress it. Encourage individuality. There is a born force in him impelling him to be himself. If he ever amounts to anything, it will be because of that force. It is your business to see that it is not weakened or distorted.

See that this force is directed into creative avenues. In his ignorance and desire for quick satisfaction he tends to destructiveness. It is easier to show his individuality by smashing a thing than by making a thing. He must be taught how to make. Otherwise his instinct will express itself by destroying.

HERE is where your duty comes in. It is more fun to make a picture than to tear one up. Teach him. It is a lot more of a game for the little girl to put a room in order, make the bed, hang up her clothes, fold and put away her things in the proper drawers, arrange the table and do something useful and beautiful that attracts attention and brings out her personality than it is to waste and strew and litter.

But it takes patience, interest, time and ingenuity on your part to show her the better way. If you are lazy, indifferent, petulant and don't want to be bothered, the child seeks to express herself in the short-cut of destruction. Surely it is worth while to set your child on the right track.

THE cheap, wretched and slovenly method is the Don't method—do not take pains to set your little girl upon right and constructive ways of self-expression; do not teach her with infinite pains how to do, to make order and beauty, but leave her to her own devices and when these result in noise and confusion, cry "Don't do that!"

The result of that course will be that the child will develop a spirit of hostility to you. She will come to regard you, in the back of her mind, as her chief enemy, for you are the one who most interferes with her natural impulses of self-expression. She will gradually come to watch you as a mouse watches the cat. Her chief study will be how to circumvent you. she will develop hypocrisy and cunning, or open rebellion.

SUPPOSE you try a different tack. Try it for one day. Do not say one Don't. Do not scold, criticise or find fault for one thing. Act as if everything the little girl does is exactly right. If she breaks a few cups and saucers or soils her frock, let her. The advantage you gain may be worth it.

But do not treat her with indifference. Do not say, "I don't care what she does. I will let her do as she pleases. It is nothing to me." For indifference itself is a kind of censure. What the child wants is love, not coldness; interest, not neglect, and that encouragement, stimulation, comradeship and direction which give sun and rain for the plant of self-expression to grow.

TAUGHT HIS RICH CHILD BLESSING OF WORK

By Damon Runyon.

Copyright, 1920, by Star Company.

THIS is a human interest story. It carries with it a powerful sermon to parents.

I am not going to attempt to change a line or a word of the manuscript of the story.

The lady who has written it has told it better than any professional writer could tell it.

Read this letter:

"October 12, 1920.

"Mr. Damon Runyon,
"N. Y. American:

"Being a consistent reader of your column, I know your ability to accurately portray the virtues and faults of human nature, and I am going to cite an instance which I am sure will evoke your interest.

"In a cheerful room at St. Luke's Hospital, New York, is thirteen-year-old Francis McGuire, the sole survivor of the fatal auto accident at Dobbs Ferry, in which his father, mother, sister, brother, aunt and uncle lost their lives.

"His father was a prominent Bronx physician, a wonderful man, who became both friend and physician after his first visit.

"Although through his business ability he amassed a fortune of approximately $350,000, he was as plain as an ordinary business man, and he reared his children to know the value of money.

"Two weeks after the death of his entire family, Francis insisted upon seeing them, and it was then the sad news was told to him. The little boy cried the entire day, and when his father's sister visited him he said:

"'Oh, Auntie, how I shall miss them!'

"And in the next breath he said:

"'Now I shall have to go to work. I wonder where I can get a job?'

"In his childish mind his father had inculcated that in order to live all men must, or, rather, should, work, and he realized that, bereft of his father and mother, he was without support.

"It never entered his mind that he had money, or that his father was a rich man. Francis never heard the expression in his home which so often echoes through the homes of others: 'Get whatever you want; your father has plenty of money.'

"I hope I have made clear to you how few plutocratic parents rear democratic children.

"Yours sincerely,
"MARY A. DONEGAN.

Upon the Sand

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

ALL love that has not friendship for its base
Is like a mansion built upon the sand.
Though brave its walls as any in the land,
And its tall turrets lift their heads in grace;
Though skilful and accomplished artists trace
Most beautiful designs on every hand,
And gleaming statues in dim niches stand,
And fountains play in some flow'r-hidden place.

Yet when from the frowning east a sudden gust
Of adverse fate is blown, or sad rains fall,
Day in, day out, against its yielding wall,
Lo! the fair structure crumbles to the dust.
Love to endure life's sorrow and earth's woe
Needs friendship's solid mason-work below.

IF YOU RIDE, PAY FOR THE GAS

Unless those friends of yours are so wealthy that they do not have to think of expense, you have no business to accept frequent auto rides from them unless you share up in the way of paying for the oil, gasoline, dinners and lunches.

Even if you bear this expense your outlay has been less than that of the one furnishing the car.

The majority of persons accept an invitation to ride with the feeling that they are guests, why should not their hosts pay all the bills.

For an occasional ride this may be all right, but more often you should insist on bearing a part of the expense—and you will be getting off pretty easy if you pay only for fuel, oil and other little expenses.

Don't be a ride "sponge."

There are too many such.

Usually such persons succeed in putting the machine owners under obligations to them by entertaining them during the Winter and they figure that they are doing some good business—making some good investment.

If you feel friendly toward another, who gives you the pleasure of auto trips, never let that one feel that he has been used as a cheap way to be amused.
